COMMENT: II

THE HAWKESYARD LIBRARY

Every priest of the English Dominican Province begins his studies at Hawkesyard Priory. There he spends three years studying various aspects of philosophy before going to Black friars, Oxford, where he begins the study of theology. first three years at Hawkesyard are important for more than and acquaintance with the formal discipline of philosophy, though this of course is the central theme of his intellectual life there He must enlarge his understanding of Scripture, familiarize him self with the Fathers of the Church, her history and liturgy; he must continually enrich his experience of human possibility and achievement even where this is not explicitly ordered to redemptive mysteries of the Church.

These are all aims with which readers of THE LIFE OF THE SPEND will sympathize; and it is for this reason that they are asked the help in the achievement of these aims by contributing to the chief means are all the second that they are asked the help in the achievement of these aims by contributing to the chief means are all the second that they are asked the help in the achievement of these aims by contributing to the chief means are all the second that they are asked the help in the achievement of these aims by contributing to the chief means are all the second that they are asked the help in the achievement of these aims by contributing to the chief means are all the second that they are all the second that the second that they are all the second that they are all the second that they are all the second that the second that they are all the second that they are all the second that the second that the second the second that the sec chief means which makes that achievement possible: the appropriate oursest 122 priate current literature. The remoteness of Hawkesyard her any large library makes it necessary for the students and teachers there to rely almost entirely upon the resources of the Priori library, and these have become more and more inadequate the last true to t the last twenty years. We appeal to readers of THE LIFE OF her Spirit to help make good the serious deficiencies of the Hawker yard library, and we shall be most grateful for the gift of months or of hooks. All contributions should be accepted to the send a list beforehand, to avoid duplication. butions should be sent to the Librarian, Hawkesyard Priories Rugeley, Staffs, and will be acknowledged by him personally

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

DEAR FATHER.—May I trouble you in order to make a few observations on the review of th observations on the review of Dr Fuller's book What is Little Preaching which appears to the second of the second Preaching, which appeared in the January-February issue of your review? It is not my intention to review? It is not my intention to make any adverse comment by what Father Crichton several 1 what Father Crichton says, still less to challenge any of the statements, but because of the statements, but because of the importance of the subject and the
