

FREUD AND PHILOSOPHY

An Essay on Interpretation

by Paul Ricoeur, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Paris
Translated by Denis Savage

This book reveals Ricoeur the philosopher of language; Ricoeur the critic of Freud; and Ricoeur the theologian of religious symbol. The author is outstanding in all three roles, and the book that emerges is of rare profundity, enormous scope, and complete timeliness.

The first part of Freud and Philosophy, "Problematic", presents a profound and clear theory of signification, symbol, and interpretation. The second part, "A Reading of Freud", is required reading for anyone seriously interested in psychoanalysis. The third section includes a thoroughly audacious interpretation and criticism of Freud and a presentation of Ricoeur's own theory of symbol—particularly religious symbol—which places this study at the centre of contemporary debate over the sense of myth.

THE DEFINITION OF MORALITY

Edited by G. Wallace and A. D. M. Walker

The papers brought together in this book are in response to much recent discussion among moral philosophers as to the definition of morality and moral issues—for example, what characteristics distinguish them from the law and legal issues or etiquette and matters of good taste?

Contributors: G. Wallace, A. D. M. Walker, C. A. Whiteley, Alasdair MacIntyre, W. K. Frankena, C. C. W. Taylor, Neil Cooper, P. F. Strawson, T. L. S. Sprigge, Philippa Foot, Kurt Baier, G. E. M. Anscombe, D. P. Gauthier.

The Philosophy of the Social Sciences

Alan Ryan

Are the social sciences in principle different and more dubious undertakings than the natural sciences?

This book is an introduction to the major problems of the philosophy of social science. It covers the central sometimes controversial topics in the present debate, but demands no previous knowledge either of philosophy or the social sciences.

Modern Deductive Logic

An Introduction to its Techniques and to its Significance.

Robert John Ackermann

A volume in the Modern Introduction to Philosophy series

This book is an introduction to modern techniques of deductive logic and a discussion of their scope and significance which can be readily understood without prior mathematical or logical instruction. An unusual feature is the wealth of exercises with partly programmed answers so that the book may be used for self instruction.

Kant: The Philosophy of Right

Jeffrie G. Murphy

A volume in the Philosophers in Perspective series.

The book presents a critical exposition of Kant's political philosophy with particular emphasis on Kant's rather neglected theory of right. It provides the student with sufficient background in Kant's epistemology and ethics to understand his social and political philosophy.

Three new titles in the New Studies in the Philosophy of Religion series.

The Concept of Miracle

Richard Swinburne

Most, if not all, religions claim that miracles have occurred. Those who reject miracles do so for different reasons. This book analyses the meaning of the claim that a miracle occurred, and the evidence which could be brought or against such a claim.

Death and Immortality

D. Z. Phillips

Is death the end? Are men immortal? This monograph treats these age-old questions in a way which is informative, very original and controversial. It will be of lively interest to all who study the philosophy of religion or reflect seriously about religious belief.

Religion and Secularization

Vernon Pratt

Do religious beliefs have any meaning in a secular age? The book explores what is meant by 'secularization', surveys theological reactions to it and investigates some of its wider implications. This monograph, like others of the series, combines a comprehensive critical review of what representative thinkers have said about its subject with important and original contributions by the author himself.

Russell Remembered

Rupert Crawshay-Williams

Rupert Crawshay-Williams was a close friend and neighbour of Bertrand Russell during the last 25 years of his life. This close-up portrait attempts to show how Russell's genius manifested itself in everyday life, and includes a chapter which describes his relations with, and feelings about, current philosophy. Frontispiece 40/-

Newman

The Contemplation of Mind

Thomas Vargish

Mr Vargish examines Newman's philosophy of mind in detail, as first expressed in his Evangelical youth and as fully developed in his Oxford sermons and in the Grammar of Assent. He then uses this examination to interpret Newman's great statements on English society, on the aims of education, and on his own conversion. 45/-

God and Rationality

Thomas F. Torrance

This is a sequel to Professor Torrance's Theological Science (84/-), and to his Space, Time and Incarnation (25/-). In it he calls for a 'return to theological rationality', analyses the current 'Eclipse of God', and relates his position to the costly grace of God in Christ. 45/-

First and Last Notebooks

Simone Weil

Edited by Sir Richard Rees

The publication of the notebooks of Simone Weil in English is now complete. Both her first and last notebooks were clearly written with future books in mind, and they provide an unselfconscious self-portrait of one of the most remarkable minds and characters of this century. 2 plates 60/-

Rousseau: Religious Writings

Ronald Grimsley

Professor Grimsley has brought together writings hitherto dispersed among the many volumes of Rousseau's work and correspondence. The letters are included with the didactic writings, and an introduction to each section situates it in Rousseau's production as a whole. 70/-

The Principles of Scientific Thinking

R. HARRÉ

The first really comprehensive account of an alternative theory of science to positivism, this is potentially a most important contribution to the philosophy of science.

There are no other books which support this particular theory and it should stimulate much refreshing thought.

Schiller and the Ideal of Freedom

A Study of Schiller's Philosophical Works with Chapters on Kant

R. D. Miller

In this study of Schiller's philosophy the ideal of freedom is shown to be central to his whole thought, relevant both to his moral philosophy and to his aesthetic theories, and illuminating his ideas on poetry as well as his views on the modern state. Sir Isaiah Berlin has contributed a foreword. Second edition 30/-

PHILOSOPHICAL BOOKS

Philosophical Books, edited by Professor J. Kemp, was started in 1960 with the object of assisting librarians and individuals in the choice of books in the field of philosophy. Reviews in the professional journals often appear some considerable time after the publication of the book, while reviews in the general weeklies are often inadequate in length and in quality for professional purposes. The aim of Philosophical Books is to provide reviews that are both reasonably prompt and of a high professional standard. Reviews are normally between 300 and 1,000 words in length, though they are occasionally longer. The journal appears three times a year, in January, May and October. Paper covered. 36 pp. Subscription 20s. ($2.40) per year. Single copies 7s.

Models of Thinking

FRANK GEORGE

In this study the more logical types of human thinking are analysed, such as the ability to abstract and the development of concepts. Professor George describes the features that have long been regarded as central to thinking by experimental and theoretical psychologists and places a greater emphasis on the part played by language in cognitive affairs.

Meaning in the Arts

LOUIS ARNAUD REID

Explores in a new way the crucial problem of aesthetic meaning. The thesis of embodiment (rather than expression) as a key idea is worked and tested out in different arts and most of the seminal topics of aesthetics are lucidly discussed.

The Subject of Consciousness

C. O. EVANS

Attempts to account for the self from one's own case have led either to variants of the Pure Ego Theory or to variants of the Serial Theory. The author disputes this too easy dichotomy by presenting a third alternative. He develops a theory which is at once simple in conception and powerful in its ability to overcome the objections against the traditional theories.

Contemporary American Philosophy

Edited by J. E. SMITH

Second Series

The aim of this book is to present a cross-section of philosophical thinking in America at present. No one type of philosophy, either with respect to method or viewpoint, has guided the editor in inviting contributors. Rather, an effort has been made to show how rich and varied a philosophical diet is available. Naturalism and Idealism, personalism and pragmatism, analysis and speculative philosophy are all represented, and the ideas of fourteen, junior as well as senior, philosophers are included.

Ethics and Christianity

KEITH WARD

This book explores the logic of Christian ethics in the light of contemporary moral philosophy. As it expounds a specific moral viewpoint which has been neglected in much recent discussion, it will be important to moral philosophers; it will also be of interest to theologians, as an outline of the basic framework of Christian ethics, offering a constructive discussion of revelation and authority.

THEORY AND DECISION

An International Journal for Philosophy and Methodology of the Social Sciences

Editors:

Gerald Eberlein, Free University of Berlin, Berlin, Germany
Werner Kroeber-Riel, University of Saarland, Saarbrücken, Germany
Werner Leinfellner, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, U.S.A.
Alex C. Michalos, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa., U.S.A.

Board of Consulting Editors:

West Churchman, James Coleman, Felix von Cube, Eberhard Fels, Herbert Feigl, Gerhard Frey, Gerhard Gäfgen, Peter Hammer, Jaakko Hintikka, Ulrich Klug, Paul F. Lazarsfeld, R. Duncan Luce, Rainer Mackensen, K. B. Madsen, Karl Menger, Oskar Morgenstern, Jean Piaget, Anatol Rapoport, Nicholas Rescher, Erwin K. Scheuch, Patrick Suppes, Thure von Uexküll.

THEORY AND DECISION concentrates on three major points of interest common to economics and the social and political sciences: (1) Application of modern methods and advances in philosophy of science and co-relevant formal sciences, (2) Analysis of formal structures, (3) Intensification of interdisciplinary communication.

The methods of philosophy of science, and especially the methods of the analysis of scientific languages and of their underlying logic, together with the analysis of the general and specific methods of social and political sciences and economics will be of decisive importance in future to the social and political sciences and to economics.

THEORY AND DECISION is dedicated to the analysis and application of these methods. The aim is not to philosophize without intrinsic obligation, but to analyze concrete presuppositions, axiomatizations, and structures, and to criticize the methods and results of the above-mentioned sciences, for the purpose of increasing their efficiency and integration.

The common interest in philosophy of science and comparable formal structures of social and political sciences and economics consociates not only classical economics and social sciences, but also more recent areas of the humanities, as comparative behavioral science, ecology, modern pedagogy, cultural anthropology, modern linguistics, social psychiatry, etc.

THEORY AND DECISION will concentrate the discussion between those disciplines and promote the unification of the basic theoretical concepts.
