PROFESSIONAL INQUIRY

Professor Anne Firor Scott of Duke University, Department of History, Durham, North Carolina, is searching for the 10,000 letters and the diary of Emma Willard which were used by her first biographer, John Lord. The only available clues are, first, that Lord dated his book in 1873 from Stamford, Connecticut where, presumably, he was living at the time. Also, in the 1930s Will S. Monroe apparently had quite a few Emma Willard papers, but the location of his papers is not known. If anyone has any information about these items, please contact Professor Scott.

Studies in the History of Education

edited by Lawrence Stone

Dealing with a wide range of topics, the contributors reexamine the history of education from the standpoint of how education actually affected people's lives. They are concerned less with the institutional development of education as with its religious, economic, and social fabric. The pedagogy of the sixteenth century or the concept of adolescence in the twentieth, the propagandizing educational zeal of the evangelical movements or the cost-benefit approach of modern technology are all scrutinized in order to establish what a given society wants to obtain from education. Utilizing the methodologies of various social sciences, each contribution to this volume distills many months and even years of research, so that crucial ideas are presented succinctly. $14.00
