

Indiana University Press is pleased to announce a new series:

DRAMA AND PERFORMANCE STUDIES

Timothy Wiles, general editor

Books in this series will engage in the contemporary discourse surrounding performance, the audiences it addresses and constructs, its engagement in cultural politics, and the languages of the stage.

Shakespeare and the Ends of Comedy

By Ejner J. Jensen

"Here is a genuinely readable and enjoyable book . . . humane, balanced, unpolemical, good humored, and fundamentally sane."

— Charles R. Forker

Jensen questions a persistent critical emphasis that finds the meanings of Shakespeare's comedies in their endings. Analyzing The Merchant of Venice, Much Ado about Nothing, As You Like It, Twelfth Night and Measure for Measure, he shows how much vitality is sacrificed when critics assume that "the end crowns the work."

Theatre, Theory, Postmodernism

By Johannes Birringer

Birringer investigates postmodern culture from the perspective of the theatre and explores the theory and aesthetics of performance understood as a struggle against a threatening technological and electronic culture. Among the artists discussed are Robert Wilson, Laurie Anderson, Meredith Monk, Squat Theatre, Eugenio Barba, and Karen Finley.

Contending Rhetorics Writing in Academic Disciplines

By George L. Dillon

Supposedly a worthwhile endeavor, scholarly and scientific writing to most people is abstract, impersonal, impractical, and sometimes impossible to read. George Dillon examines this discourse, studies its relation to practical, everyday writing, and tells us why scholarly writing is anything but uniform and monolithic—and well worth reading.

The Theory-Death of the Avant-Garde

By Paul Mann

"Brilliant . . . An important book . . . for anyone interested in the arts in the twentieth century."

— Marjorie Perloff

In this study of the discourse of the avant-garde, Paul Mann explores the notion that to produce a theory of the avant-garde is to articulate its death.

Stages of Terror Terrorism, Ideology, and Coercion as Theatre History

By Anthony Kubiak

Using Aristotle's Poetics as its point of departure, Anthony Kubiak traces the forms or "stages" of terror as a cultural and performative principle through English Renaissance and Restoration plays, through the modern and postmodern, to contemporary terrorist "theatres."

The Origins and Nature of Language

By Giorgio Fano

Translated by Susan Petrilli

Giorgio Fano's classic study describes the very make-up of language. Although mainly concerned with verbal language, Fano devotes a great deal of attention to nonverbal signs, which he theorizes constitute the basis of language.

Signs Becoming Signs Our Perfusive, Pervasive Universe

By Floyd Merrell

"Merrell . . . stands out as our subtlest and most sophisticated American spokesman for the doctrine of signs . . ." —Thomas A. Sebeok

With a broad, transdisciplinary perspective, Merrell accounts for our knowledge of a universe open to an infinity of interpretations.

Gone Primitive Savage Intellectuals, Modern Lives Marianna Torgovnick

"I think this is a superb book; and—in a way that goes beyond what being good as a book usually implies—it is a kind of gift to its own culture, a guide to the perplexed. It is lucid, usually fair, laced with a certain feminist mockery and animated by some surprising sympathies."
—Arthur C. Danto, New York Times Book Review
