JOURNAL

Editorial.

UNFORTUNATELY, members have not very readily responded to our invitation to contribute to the Journal, and we would again particularly ask them to give this matter their attention. We are pleased to say that a lead has been made in this issue by Col J D Blyth, who contributes an article on "Airscrew Characteristics and Aeroplane Performance Prediction." The Council trust that other members will follow his example for the May issue.

The attendance at meetings recently has not been very good, despite the fact that papers on a very wide range of subjects have been read by eminently qualified people. The Council would be glad to receive from members any suggestions they may have in regard to lectures, either as to the time they are held, or the subjects which are considered most popular, etc, as it is the earnest desire of the Council to have the meetings well attended and appreciated by as many members as possible.

By the time members receive this issue of the Journal, the General and Special Meetings will have been held, and members will have had an opportunity of expressing their views on the subject of the proposed amalgamation with the Royal Aeronautical Society. As regards the Journal, should the amalgamation proposals be carried, it is not possible to say whether it will be continued in its present form, or whether it will be merged with some similar publication, but members may rest assured that their interests will be studied in every possible way.
