

100 recipients, 5 are students of political science and are listed below.

Graduate Fellows

Javier Corrales, Harvard University
Cynthia D. Duncan, Ohio State University

Regina M. Freer, University of Michigan

Jide O. Nzellbe, Princeton University

Postdoctoral Fellow

John W. Cotman, American University

MacArthur Foundation Grants Awarded

Twenty scholars have been awarded MacArthur Grants to study peace and international cooperation. The research and writing grants, which are part of the Foundation's Program on Peace and International Cooperation, are designed to encourage analysts to explore international issues and to seek out innovative approaches to new policy dilemmas emerging in the rapidly changing world arena. Amongst the winners were several political scientists, including:

James Der Derian, professor of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

James C. Scott, professor of political science, Yale University

Simona Sharoni, professor, School of International Service, American University.

1994 Policy Studies Organization Awards

Harold D. Lasswell Award

For outstanding scholarship in contribution to our understanding of the substance or process of public policy. Recipient: Irving Horowitz, Rutgers University

Donald Campbell Award

For being an outstanding methodological innovator in policy studies. Recipient: David Nachmias, University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee

Hubert H. Humphrey Award

For being an outstanding public policy practitioner. Recipient: Walter D. Broadnax, Department of Health and Human Services

Theodore Lowi Award

For the best article in the Policy Studies Journal in 1993. Recipients: David Rochefort, Northeastern University and Roger Cobb, Brown University

Jeffrey Pressman Award

For the best article in the Policy Studies Review in 1993. Recipient: Ira Sharkansky, Hebrew University

Aaron Wildavsky Award

For the best policy studies book in 1993–94. Recipients: The 42 chapter authors of the Encyclopedia of Policy Studies

Thomas R. Dye Award

For outstanding service to the Policy Studies Organization. Recipient: William Crotty, Northwestern University

Robert Lane Award

For outstanding service as a PSO president. Recipient: Matthew Holden, University of Virginia

Miriam K. Mills Award

An outstanding young person and/or woman in the policy studies field. Recipient: Paula McClain, University of Virginia.

SSRC–MacArthur Foundation Program on International Peace and Security

The Social Science Research Council is pleased to announce this year's fellows. Eight were selected out of 103 applicants from Eastern Europe, Africa, and successor republics of the former Soviet Union. The fellows will be sponsored by the program to pursue their work on issues on international peace and security in a changing world for 4–6 months at a major research institution outside their home region. The eight 1994 Visiting Scholars are:

Branislava Baranovic, University of Zagreb, Croatia, Ethnic Nationalism and Education for Peace in Postsocialism;

Mihai Gribincea, Embassy of the Republic of Moldova (Moscow), Chisinau, Moldova, Russian Military Policy toward the Near Abroad;

Atieno C.E. MBoya, The Public Law Institute, Nairobi, Kenya, Law-Related Education as a Tool for Conflict Resolution;

Silvia Mihalikova, Comenius University, Bratislava, Slovakia, Democratic Political Culture as a Pre-Condition for Developing Stable Democracy in Eastern European Countries (The Case of Slovakia);

Backson Muchini, University of Zimbabwe, Harare, Zimbabwe, War Affected Children: the Nature, Scope and Programmatic Responses to the Problem in Africa South of the Sahara;

Victor P. Perebenessyuk, Ukrainian Research Institute for Youth Problems, Kiev, Ukraine, Internal Aspects of International Security: Conflicts in the Post-Soviet Countries in Transition to Democracy and Market Economies;

Temenuga G. Rakadjiiska, Bulgarian Academy of Sciences, Sofia, Bulgaria, The High Marginalization of East European Societies as a Threat to International Peace and Security;

Sanja M. Spoljar-Vrzina, Institute for Anthropology, Zagreb, Croatia, A Heart Sheltered by a Roof and a Roof without Hearts to Shelter: Refugee Families in Croatia.

Stetson Is First Recipient of Fairchild Award

At the annual meeting of the Southern Political Science Association in November, 1994, the Women's Caucus for Political Science: South presented the first Fairchild Award. Established in 1993 to honor former Caucus president, Erika Fairchild, who died in November 1992, the award was presented to Dorothy McBride Stetson.

A professor and former chair of the Political Science Department at Florida Atlantic University, Dorothy Stetson was the unanimous choice of the selection committee that reviewed the nominations of many distinguished political scientists. Since her 1968 doctorate from Vanderbilt University, Stetson has achieved a distinguished record of scholarship, instruction, administration, and service in political science in general and the women's caucus in particular. A former president of the Caucus, Stetson is the recipient of numerous awards and honors, including the 1990 Outstanding Scholar in Florida Atlantic's College of Social Science. In the Southern Political Science Association and the Women's Caucus: South, Stetson is especially remembered for her 1990 study of the status of women in PhD-granting departments in the region. Published in PS, this study became the model for similar reviews in all regions of the association.

In presenting the award to Stetson, Susette Talarico, chair of the selection committee, emphasized that Dorothy Stetson clearly met the four criteria set for the Fairchild Award. These included a strong record of scholarship, a commitment to students and teaching, strong service to the profession, and the personal and professional attributes of collegiality and civility. All of these criteria distinguished Erika Fairchild's life and career. By honoring political scientists who embody these characteristics, the Women's Caucus hopes to highlight the accomplishments and contributions of scholars like Dorothy Stetson. In the words of one of Stetson's nominators, Sue Tolleson Rinehart, Dorothy Stetson "is an utterly dependable professional, always willing to volunteer, to help to contribute. Her professional service is characterized by the same thoughtful, inquisitive and measured approach that she brings to her research. But she is, equally, a delightful person, whose warm humor and consideration have been something upon which her friends have come to rely." [See picture on page 138.]

Other Awards

Deborah J. Gerner, associate professor, department of political science, Kansas University, has been selected to receive the Byron T. Shutz Award for Distinguished Teaching. Gerner is the fifteenth recipient of this award for distinguished teaching.

Matthew Holden, Henry L. and Grace M. Doherty Professor, University of Virginia, received the Robert Lane Award for his work in public policy.

Chun-tu Hsueh, president, Huang Hsing Foundation (USA), co-chaired two conferences on "Huang Hsing" and "China's relations with her neighboring nations towards the 21st century" in Beijing, October 1994. The first conference was jointly sponsored with the Institute of Modern History of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, and the second with the China Institute of Contemporary International Relations. The Huang Hsing Distinguished Lecture program was also inaugurated at St. Anthony's College, Oxford University in October 1994. A meeting in commemoration of Huang Hsing's birthday was held in Beijing in October 1994. It was attended by a Political Bureau Standing Committee member and other Chinese leaders.

Frances Humphrey Howard, was one of six people to be honored with the first Eleanor Roosevelt awards for "profound contributions to humanity."

Malcolm E. Jewell, professor emeritus, department of political science, University of Kentucky was awarded the 1994 Manning J. Dauer, Jr. Award for his exceptional service to the political science profession personified by Manning Dauer of the University of Florida. The award was presented at the annual meeting of the Southern Political Science Association.

Stathis N. Kalyva, assistant professor, department of politics, New York University, has been awarded the Council of Graduate Schools/

University Microfilms International Distinguished Dissertation Award in Social Sciences for his dissertation "Religious Mobilization and Party Formation: Confessional Parties and the Christian Democratic Phenomenon, completed at the University of Chicago.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, Leavey Professor, Georgetown University and senior fellow, American Enterprise Institute, received an honorary degree from Syracuse University in conjunction with the 70th anniversary celebration of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Paula D. McClain, professor and chair, department of government and foreign affairs, University of Virginia, received the Miriam Mills Award in Policy Studies, given to a young person and/or a woman, recognizing both achievement and potential, at the 1994 meeting of the APSA.

Mark C. Miller, department of government, Clark University, was named the Clark University Teacher of the year for 1994.

Malcolm E. Jewell

Richard Murray

Richard Murray, professor of political science, University of Houston, was awarded a university-wide award for excellence in teaching for 1994.

Jewel Limar Prestage, professor of political science and dean, Benjamin Banneker Honors College, Prairie View A&M University, was awarded an honorary degree, Doctor of Humane Letters, by the University of the District of Columbia, May 1994.

Ruhi Ramazani, Edward R. Stettinius Professor, University of Virginia, received UVA's highest award, the Thomas Jefferson Award, at the University's Fall Convocation.

Morris M. Wilhelm

Kenneth S. Sherrill, department of political science, Hunter College of the City University of New York has been awarded the Gustavus Myers Center for the Study of Human Rights in North America prize for an Outstanding Book in the Study of Human Rights in North America in 1993 for his volume, edited by Mark Wolinsky, Gays and the Military (Princeton University Press, 1993).

Morris M. Wilhelm, professor of political science, Indiana University southeast was selected as the Outstanding Teacher of the Year for the IU-Southeast campus.

Quansheng Zhao, associate professor of political science, Hong Kong University of Science & Technology and Old Dominion University was named the winner of the 1994 "Outstanding Academic Book" from Choice for his book Japanese Policymaking: The Politics Behind Politics-Informal Mechanism and the Making of China Policy (Praeger, 1993).

In Memoriam

Paul Theodore David

Paul T. David, Professor Emeritus of Government and Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia, died September 7, 1994, at home in Charlottesville. Born August 12, 1906, son of a Methodist minister in a family devoted to education and service, he spent most of his youth on the ancestral farm at Onarga, Illinois, where he attended public schools. He graduated from Antioch College in 1928 and from Brown University in 1933, with a doctorate in economics. His dissertation, written on a Brookings Institution fellowship and later published by Brookings, was The Economics of Air Mail Transportation (1934).

Paul's professional life was notable both for the variety of organizations in which he worked and the diversity of subjects to which he made influential contributions. He was energetic, a quick study, a good writer, and always receptive to new challenges. A fortuitous sequence of career moves took him from government service, to professional associations and think tanks, to university faculties; from economics, to public policy, to political science, and finally to broad social science.

In his early career as a government economist, Paul participated in memorable events of the New Deal. In 1933, through Antioch president Arthur E. Morgan, who had just been named chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, he became, literally, the first employee of TVA. He organized the staging office in Washington, and later in Knoxville worked on the economic and social staff during TVA's most creative period. Also, somewhat to his own surprise—and the consternation of his superiors—he found himself organizing TVA employees in a white collar union. At TVA he had met the protean Floyd W. Reeves, and when Reeves undertook the research on personnel for FDR's Committee on Administrative Management, Paul became his deputy and co-author of a report, Personnel Administration in the Federal Service (1937), which set the reform agenda on its subject for decades to come.

Back in Washington, again with Reeves, Paul became head of staff and produced major reports on education and youth employment, first for a presidential advisory committee and then for a special commission of the American Council of Education.

In 1942, Paul joined the economics staff of the Bureau of the Budget. His assignments were varied, but the background of his dissertation led to his becoming the specialist on civil aviation policy for the Bureau and the White House. Stemming from that, he served as a principal secretariat officer for the 1944 international conference at Chicago that led to establishment of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO). In 1946, President Truman appointed him to the U.S. delegation to ICAO at Montreal, where he served until 1950.

By then, Paul's interests were shifting from economics to politics.