

The Library of America

The complete works of America's greatest authors – novelists, poets, dramatists, philosophers, essayists, historians – are for the first time being collected in a uniform series of handsome hardcover volumes. Each volume comprises several works by a single writer, all in authoritative texts derived when possible from the definitive scholarly edition.

Songsters and Saints

Vocal Traditions on Race Records

PAUL OLIVER

An innovatory book in which this celebrated writer on the blues rediscovers the wealth of neglected traditions to be found on Race records issued specifically for black purchasers in the 1920s. From songs of Southern rural dances to the even more neglected song-sermons of the Baptist and Sanctified preachers and the gospel songs of the church congregations, this is the first book to examine the presence of these traditions on commercial records.

Interdisciplinary Perspectives on Modern History

Political Analysis and American Health Care

Essays

THEODORE R. MARMOR

This volume considers how the general findings of political science shed light on the disputes over medical care; it looks at particular instances of political conflict in American medicine; and it relates different sorts of political analyses to the appraisal of such issues as national health insurance in the contentious 1970s and the procompetitive reform in the early 1980s.

The Trouble with America

MICHEL CROZIER

Foreword by David Reisman

Michel Crozier has seen America at its best and at its worst. The distinguished French sociologist made extended visits there during the peak of American prestige and power in the 1950s and twice during the long trauma that, as he sees it, began with the assassination of John F. Kennedy and perhaps ended with the Iranian hostage crisis. Crozier asks the question: How can it be that the system that once seemed to work so well now seems to work so poorly? His answer goes to the core elements of the American system: the due-process legal system, the mass production/mass consumption market, the management model of rationality and the egalitarian welfare state. His admiration for these is genuine, but he believes that, like earlier social innovations, they may now be hardening to a point where they block American creativity.

Worker Cooperatives in America

Edited by ROBERT JACKALL & HENRY M. LEVIN

This comprehensive study of worker cooperatives in America examines the history, dynamics, challenges and potential of this remarkable form of enterprise. Because worker cooperatives are both owned and managed democratically by their workers, they represent a vital form of workplace democracy in a society where employees rarely participate in the ownership or control of organisations that shape their working life. The editors have brought together in this book a very useful collection of essays which thoroughly illuminates virtually every aspect of the cooperative phenomenon.

The Marcus Garvey and Universal Negro Improvement Association Papers Volume III September 1920-August 1921

Edited by ROBERT A. HILL

The Marcus Garvey and Universal Negro Improvement Association Papers will take its place among the most important records of the Afro-American experience. New York Times

This is the third volume of Robert A. Hill's monumental ten volume survey of Marcus Garvey and the extraordinary mass movement of black social protest he inspired.

The Garvey movement from 1920 to 1921 was an unfolding drama which saw American and European, political, diplomatic, and economic interests pitted against the first modern black struggle for freedom. Through his careful documentation of the complexities and turmoil of the Garvey movement, Robert Hill establishes himself as the pre-eminent scholar of Garveyism and its relationship to the international development of black nationalism.

America's Working Man
Work, Home, and Politics among Blue-Collar Property Owners

DAVID HALLE

'Am I a working man? You bet! I'm standing here freezing and breathing in all these fumes . . . You're not a working man if you work in an office.'

Over a period of six years, at factory and warehouse, in their homes and pubs, at union meetings and social outings, David Halle talked and listened to workers of an automated chemical plant in New Jersey's industrial heartland. He has emerged with an unusually comprehensive picture of blue collar life in America.

Halle tackles two of the classic questions of sociology: How far do the lives and beliefs of blue-collar workers overlap with those of the 'middle-class'? How much are these workers integrated into or alienated from, the class structure? Throughout the book, Halle illustrates his analysis with excerpts of the workers' views on everything from strikes, class consciousness, politics, job security, and toxic chemicals to marriage, betting on the horses, God, home ownership, drinking, adultery, the Super Bowl, and life after death.

Steppin' Out

New York Nightlife and the Transformation of American Culture, 1890-1930

LEWIS A. ERENBERG

The evolution of New York nightlife from the Gay Nineties through the Jazz age was, as Lewis A. Erenberg shows, both symbol and catalyst of America's transition out of the Victorian period. Cabaret culture led the way to new styles of behaviour and consumption, dissolving conventional barriers between classes, race, the sexes – even between life and art. A fabulous era of chorus girls, hip flasks and lobster palaces one-steps through the pages of this ground-breaking and very entertaining cultural history.

Public Values and Private Power
in American Politics

Edited by J. DAVID GREENSTONE

These eight essays focus on an issue central to the work of the renowned political scientist Grant McConnell – the conflict between private and public values in a polity dominated by self-interest. The contributors, distinguished political scientists in their own right, emphasise the ways in which the often group-dominated processes of American democracy undermine rather than protect minority rights and subvert rather than contribute to the interests of the general public.

One and Inseparable Daniel Webster and the Union

MAURICE G. BAXTER

From the ratification of the Constitution to the outbreak of the Civil War, few persons played a greater role in American history than Daniel Webster. He was a spokesman of New England commercial interests in the war of 1812, later an apostle of the industrial system and advocate of protective tariffs; a brilliant expositor of the Constitution as an instrument for national economic growth and strong central government; the architect of a foreign policy that brought permanent peace between the United States and England; and the Great Compromiser who tried to reconcile the clashing interests of North and South. Despite his importance, Webster has never been the subject of a full-scale, scholarly biography. Maurice G. Baxter's One and Inseparable traces the inter-related evolution of the public career and private life of this imposing and controversial Yankee of whom Ralph Waldo Emerson once said: 'Nature had not in our days, or not since Napoleon, cut out such a masterpiece.'

Province of Reason

SAM BASS WARNER, Jr.

This book is about some of the largest events of the twentieth century, about international war, economic collapse, new science and technologies and about the transformation of an old milltown region into a modern American metropolis. Warner's unique book sees those changes through the eyes of fourteen particular Bostonians whose lives span the years from 1850 to 1980 – a time when Boston, like all American cities, was being rebuilt according to the changing specifications of science, engineering, mass wealth and big corporations.

From Bostonian Brahmins to self-made millionaires, Warner brings us a wide variety of characters: May Austin, mystic; Fred Allen, radio comedian; Charles A. Stone and Edwin S. Webster, electrical engineers; Elizabeth Richards, reformist clubwoman; Emily Green Balch, economist and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize; Willam Madison Wood, textile magnate; Fred Erwin Beal, socialist labour organiser; Louise Andrews Kent, suburban housewife and writer; Vannevar Bush, science administrator; Laurence K. Marshall, electronics entrepreneur; James Bryant Conant, university president and educational reformer; and Rachel Carson, renowned science writer. Their individual experiences offer a unique perspective on this period of history.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

- 1 All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to: The Editor, Journal of American Studies, School of English and American Studies, University of East Anglia, Norwich NR4 7TJ, England.
- 2 Articles should generally contain about 5,000 words. Longer or shorter articles, or articles in two or more parts, may be accepted by arrangement with the Editors.
- 3 Submission of an article is taken to imply that it has not previously been published, and is not being considered for publication elsewhere.
- 4 Contributions should be clearly typed in double spacing (including footnotes), preferably on A4 paper, with a wide left-hand margin. Diagrams, maps and illustrations may be included.
- 5 Spelling may conform either to British or American usage, providing it is consistent throughout.
- 6 Footnotes should be used sparingly: in general, to give sources of direct quotations, references to main authorities on disputable questions, and evidence relied on for a new or unusual conclusion. They should be numbered consecutively, and may most conveniently be placed, in double spacing, at the end of the article.
- 7 For guidance on matters of style, contributors should refer either to the MLA Handbook (1977), or to the Journal of American Studies Style Notes, copies of which may be obtained from the Editors.
- 8 Contributors should keep one copy of the typescript for correcting proofs.
- 9 Notes intended for the Editors or Printer should be on a separate sheet.
- 10 First proofs may be read and corrected by contributors provided that they can give the Editor an address through which they can be reached without delay and can guarantee to return the corrected proofs to the Editor, by airmail where necessary, within three days of receiving them.
- 11 Corrections should be kept to an absolute minimum. They should be confined to errors of the typist or printer unless the Editor authorizes otherwise.
- 12 Contributors of articles and review essays receive 25 free offprints. Extra copies may be ordered according to a scale of charges.
- 13 Contributors need not be members of the British Association for American Studies. Unsolicited typescripts can only be returned to overseas contributors who send International Reply Coupons (not postage stamps).
- 14 Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyright, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the USA.
