

SPIRITUAL READING FOR READERS OF The Life of the Spirit

The Eucharist and the Confessional

F. D. Joret, O.P.

Here is a book about two sacraments vital for our spiritual life. Christ called us to him if we should be thirsty and being thirsty for supernatural life, for union with Christ, we naturally seek him frequently in the Eucharist. Father Joret guides us in understanding this instinctive act of love so that we can begin to love more clearly and more fully understand God's mercy and his love.

A Saint of the Week

Desmond Murray, O.P.

Forty-eight short lives of English, Irish and Scottish and universal saints taken from the sanctoral calendar, some of them famous, some of them little known. Arranged four to a month and each followed by a practical lesson for the Catholic living in the world.

The Sacraments: Signs of Life

A. M. Roguet, O.P.

The sacraments are here treated as acts of Christ, living and active in his Church. As would be expected of its author, who is closely identified with the liturgical movement in France, the intention is to make the liturgical forms of the sacraments living things, each with its bearing on the daily life of the Christian.

The Blessed Sacrament and the Mass

St Thomas Aquinas

Originally published in 1935, this re-issue makes readily available the classical teaching of St Thomas, which will be especially valuable for lay people who wish to deepen their theological understanding. There are useful notes on such technicalities as 'quality', 'accidents', and 'substance'.

The Spirituality of the Old Low Countries

Stephanus Axters, O.P.

This little book is a translation of five lectures given in 1946 in Paris on the spiritual writers of that part of northern Europe which used to be called the Low Countries. When one thinks of names such as Ruysbroeck, Thomas à Kempis and Blosius one detects a unity more than geographical and a universality which gives the whole world a claim on them. Their influence has been immense. Spiritual writers are those who treat of the life of union with God by grace and friendship. Father Axters is the scholar and historian and his appeal will be to the learned, but also, to the many who aspire to lead the spiritual life by striving to do God's will and to practise the Christian virtues which shone forth in Our Lord.

... this English translation can be warmly recommended for the admirably concise account which its original gives of the chief problems which are to be considered in assessing the history of mystical devotion in the Low Countries.

The Life of the Spirit

This excellent book reminds one of those miniatures with which the medieval artists—not least those of the Low Countries—adorned the initial letters in their liturgical books; managing to include in very limited space an astonishing number of figures, and even sometimes more than one scene.

THE LETTERS OF HENRY SUSO

The friendship which existed between Henry Suso, the fourteenth-century Dominican friar, and his spiritual daughter, Elspeth Stigel, is one of the most fascinating and fruitful in the story of the mystics. We owe our knowledge of the whole of his mystical teaching to the record of letters and conversations between the two. Elspeth collected and copied twenty-seven letters which Suso sent to her and others of his spiritual daughters, and which form her Book of Letters on which this translation is based. Twenty-three are reproduced here and give an account of the development of the spiritual life from conversion to the highest stage of contemplation.

AN INTRODUCTION TO CONTEMPLATIVE MEDITATION

F. D. Joret, O.P.

The art of spiritual recollection, of being 'spiritually' tranquil within God, has almost been forgotten by too many of the laity, and even those who would consider themselves devout perhaps spend too little time in seeking God within themselves. The twentieth century is a century of 'acts' and Fr Joret here seeks to restore the balance by showing his readers the predispositions necessary for fruitful recollection.

A CHRISTOLOGY FROM THE SERMONS OF ST VINCENT FERRER

Selected and translated by S.M.C.

'When sermon notes over 600 years old find a new selector, editor, and translator there must be something pretty unusual about the sermon notes. In this case, of course, there is; not only was the original preacher one of the great saints of Christendom, he was and is a very legend of a successful preacher. For clear form and planning these sermon notes remain a model. St Vincent told his thousands the points he was going to make, he made them clearly and well and then stopped. Miracles of sermons, and sermon miracles, indeed.'

THE EVERYDAY CATHOLIC

If you want to be one of those better-informed Catholics—which you should be—read The Everyday Catholic because it is a treasury of all those pieces of information and instruction that make all the difference. What are original sin, redemption, suffering, temptation, prudence, justice?—all these questions, and many more, are answered. Seventy-six doctrinal, but not academic, essays; just what most people want.
