V.N. TATISHCHEV: GUARDIAN OF THE UNUSUAL! PETRINE REVOLUTION

By Rudolph L. Daniels, Ph.D.

V.N. Tatishchev: Guardian of the Petrine Revolution is more than a biography of a Russian statesman. Since Tatishchev was in the forefront of the major political, cultural and economic events of the second quarter of eighteenth century Russia, this book paints a verbal picture of the era between the reigns of Peter the Great and Catherine the Great. The book also treats the more general aspects of Russian political and social history in the wake of the Petrine reforms.

Some of the topics contained which might be of particular interest:

- Historiographic origin of the "Norman Theory."
- The beginnings of the Siberian metal industry.
- The Succession crisis of 1730.
- Tatishchev as an historian—a reinterpretation of 18th century Russian historical science.
- The development of the Petrine Service Nobility.

Soviet Architecture, 1917-1962

A Bibliographic Guide to Source Material

BY ANATOLE SENKEVITCH, JR., University of Maryland. 304 pp. (tnt.), index. $13.50

This annotated bibliography contains over 1,000 titles of monographs and articles pertaining to the history and ideology of Soviet architecture from 1917 to 1962. It is the first convenient listing available for this material on Soviet architecture. The bibliography includes Russian and Western-language publications, the Russian works forming the largest portion of the material available. The bibliography is arranged in seven sections. Section I identifies reference tools available for studying the history of Soviet architecture. Section II identifies published documents that are basic for such a study. Section III identifies theoretical works related to the aesthetics, ideology, and theory in the development of Soviet architecture. Sections IV, V, and VI identify basic source material related to the major phases and problems within the historical evolution of Soviet architecture. The final section lists writings by or about important Soviet architects. Each entry contains a bibliographic description and an annotation that evaluates the nature and content of the work. Abstracts have been included when the material is of particular interest. The entries are numbered and indexed to increase the usefulness of the bibliography.
