

Syracuse University, Green studied medicine at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine. At medical school he came under the influence of John Money, a distinguished psychologist who studied gender development. Later, during psychiatric training at Los Angeles School of Medicine, he worked with Robert Stoller, a psychoanalyst with a particular interest in sexual behaviour. Green completed his psychiatry training at the National Institute of Mental Health in Bethesda, Maryland (1964–66), and was then awarded a fellowship assignment at the Maudsley Hospital in London (1966–67). He subsequently returned to the USA to direct the Human Sexuality Program at the State University of New York at Stonybrook.

In the 1980s, Green took a degree in law, graduating from the Yale Law School in 1987. His legal training was a major asset in subsequent court appearances. In the 1990s, he moved to the UK, where he became Professor of Psychological Medicine and Research Director of the Gender Identity Clinic at Charing Cross Hospital in London, and Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Criminology in Cambridge.

Green was an attractive, engaging man who was able to take on the establishment because, as a complete non-conformist, apart from those he loved, he had little interest in what others thought of him.

He is survived by his son, Adam Hines-Green, an artist; his previous wife, Melissa Hines; and his recent partner, Clare Loveday.
