

Religion and Rural Society:

South Lindsey 1825-1875

JAMES OBELKEVICH, Princeton University. □ This is a social history of religion in a rural district in Lincolnshire during the middle decades of the nineteenth century. It concludes that both the heightening of religious activity in the early part of the period and its later decline had their origins in social change: the triumph of agricultural capitalism, the breakdown of the traditional village order, and the uneven emergence of a society of classes, each with its distinctive outlook and religious style.

English Towns in Transition 1500-1700

PETER CLARK; and PAUL SLACK. □ In this lucid synthesis of recent research into urban and local history, the authors reconstruct a picture of the quality of life in Tudor and Stuart towns and in so doing present an analysis of the historical processes which decisively shaped early modern urban society. A comprehensive bibliography of new work in the field of urban and local history completes the book.

Paston Letters and Papers of the Fifteenth Century, Part II

Edited by NORMAN DAVIS. □ The Paston family papers provide an incomparable picture of life in fifteenth-century England and illustrate the resources of the language at an important period. Part II includes several important documents hitherto unpublished, and gives special attention to identifying handwriting and establishing dates. A select index covers the principal names in Parts I and II.

THE JOURNAL OF BRITISH STUDIES
TRINITY COLLEGE
HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

The Journal of British Studies, founded in 1961, is published at Trinity College under the auspices of the Conference on British Studies. It was the result of the imaginative generosity of a Trinity alumnus, Frederick E. Hasler (Hon. LL.D. 1957) who contributed funds to the College for the specific purpose of establishing a learned periodical in the field of British history. Several Trinity alumni subsequently contributed to the fund and Trinity College now supports the publication of the Journal.

The Conference on British Studies is the official organization in the United States and Canada of scholars working in the field of British history and culture; its status as such is recognized by the American Historical Association of which it is an affiliate. Its nearly eight hundred members are drawn from fifty states and five provinces. It convenes twice each year, usually at New York University. The Conference awards a prize every five years for the best first book by an American or Canadian scholar.

The Conference sponsors a considerable publications program. It publishes the Journal of British Studies at Trinity College; the British Studies Intelligencer, a newsletter, at Western Washington State College, Bellingham, Washington; and Archives in British History and Culture, a series devoted to the publication of documents, at West Virginia University, Morgantown; and Current Research in British Studies, a quadrennial survey of research in progress in the United States and Canada, published at Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas and edited at Western Washington State College. The Conference also sponsors a series of short monographs, Studies in British History and Culture, edited at Wittenberg University, Springfield, Ohio and published by the Shoe-String Press, Hamden, Connecticut. Under the aegis of the Conference, Cambridge University Press publishes a bibliographical and biographical series. Albion, including the proceedings of the Conference in its regional and national meetings, is published four times a year at Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina, and is sent to all members of the Conference.

In addition to the Conference on British Studies, there are several affiliates: the Pacific Coast Conference on British Studies, the Pacific Northwest Conference on British Studies, the Midwest Conference on British Studies, the Southern Conference on British Studies, and the New England Conference on British Studies. Each of these vital autonomous groups has its own officers, programs, and other activities. There are also local groups centered in Los Angeles, Detroit, Pittsburgh, and San Francisco.

The Journal of British Studies appears twice in the academic year, in the autumn and in the spring. The annual subscription is $8.00. Checks for subscriptions and enquiries concerning advertising rates should be directed to the Business Manager, British Studies, Box 1315, Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, 06106.

Manuscripts should be sent, with self-addressed return stamped envelope, to the Editor, L. P. Curtis, Jr., Department of History, Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island, 02912. Articles should not exceed 8,000 words of text.

Volume XVII, No. 1 will be published in the fall of 1977.
