THE DIALECTICS OF LEGAL REPRESSION

By Isaac D. Balbus

Dr. Balbus explains the response of the criminal courts of the United States to the black ghetto revolts of the mid-1960s. He provides a detailed reconstruction of the sanction process — from point of arrest to point of ultimate disposition — in the cities of Chicago, Detroit, and Los Angeles.

This book will have wide appeal to those whose interests include the criminal justice system and its relationship to the broader socioeconomic system for which it performs necessary functions. It also provides considerable provocative material for those students who are examining problems of elite responses to mass violence. Finally, the book has value for people with a particular interest in the black ghetto revolts of the last decade. $4.95

ON RECORD Files and Dossiers in American Life

Edited by Stanton Wheeler

This volume is designed to shed light on the phenomenon of record-keeping, to describe the kinds of records that are kept on people, and the problems and issues that arise with respect to their use and impact. It also shows how the very rationality of our constantly modernizing society is creating new problems that demand the attention of administrators, policy makers, and indeed all citizens. $6.95
