COMMON AND UNCOMMON MASKS

WRITINGS ON THEATRE—1961-1970

by RICHARD GILMAN*

*"The most interesting theater chronicle since Robert Brustein's Seasons of Discontent in 1965. Richard Gilman excels at precise, economic description of a play's central effect... He is particularly tough and acute on literary adaptations for stage... If you care about theater, you will read Common and Uncommon Masks." — WALTER CLEMONS, New York Times

Stanley Kauffmann says: "Richard Gilman's criticism shines with theatrical insight, intellectual resource, and moral fervor. What illumination he gives us, what pleasure. It's a damned small compliment to say that he is one of the best theater critics in American history because there have been so few good ones, but Gilman is far up in that lonely front rank."

KATHAKALI: AN INTRODUCTION TO THE DANCE-DRAMA OF KERALA

by Clifford R. Jones and Betty True Jones

"It is like nothing seen in the West before....From the very first moments - with ceremonial light and hand-held traditional silk curtain - you are in a unique theatrical landscape. This is one of the real epic theatres of the world... The company is clearly wonderful, and you don't have to know the first thing about Kathakali dance to recognize its authority and excellence....There is a special experience to be had here, and it should not casually be missed." - Clive Barnes, N.Y. Times, reviewing the performances. The authors describe the elaborate and colorful makeup and costumes, the Spartan training of the performers, the enormous special body of hand language, the choreographic structure, acting technique and music of this exotic classic theatre of South India. Translation-synopses of five of the principal plays are given; and there are many illustrations and a glossary. Co-published with the American Society for Eastern Arts. Paperbound. $3.95

THEATRE IN INDIA by Balwant Gargi

"This is an impressive history of thirty centuries of theatre in India, enlivened by many excellent line drawings and photographs....The best short history we have yet had." - N.Y. Herald Tribune. $6.95

Announcing the first volume of a superb new English-language edition of Brecht

Bertolt Brecht

COLLECTED PLAYS • Volume 1

"The new versions are welcome. . . . Brecht's influence on the theater has been rivalled in our time only by those of Stanislavski and Artaud. . . . The new series is valuable because it takes Brecht as seriously as he ought to be. To leave nothing out, to offer the plays in the company of the changes Brecht made and his own thoughts about the works, is to give us what we need to begin to do him justice."

—RICHARD GILMAN

front page, N.Y. Times Book Review

The initial volume includes Baal, Drums in the Night, In the Jungle of Cities, The Life of Edward the Second of England, and five one-act plays.

TWENTY PLAYS OF THE NŌ THEATRE

Edited with an introduction by Donald Keene

"With this book Donald Keene and his students have almost doubled the number of Nō plays available in English... It is not often in our highly eclectic society that we can thank someone for giving us knowledge of hitherto unknown major accomplishments of the human spirit, but that is exactly what we can do now. This book is like the discovery of 1,000 lines lost from Homer or Isaiah."

PRENTICE-HALL PRESENTS

IMAGINATIVE TEXTS ON THE THEATRE

THE PRENTICE-HALL SERIES IN THEATRE AND DRAMA, OSCAR G. BROCKETT, INDIANA UNIVERSITY, EDITOR.

PLAYWRITING: THE STRUCTURE OF ACTION

Sam Smiley, University of Missouri, Columbia

Professor Smiley helps the student understand and bridge the transition from idea to dramatic text. Covering classic mystery, theater of the absurd, symbolist, and other theatrical types, he presents basic principles of dramatic structure, the writing process, and business marketing procedures once the play is finished. January 1971 320 pp. paper $4.50 (68453-0) cloth $7.95 (68454-8)

PLAY DIRECTING: ANALYSIS, COMMUNICATION AND STYLE

Francis Hodge, University of Texas at Austin

Dr. Hodge's new book is a complete study of the process of directing modern and historical plays in the contemporary theater. Style is discussed in technical terms with approaches in how to perceive style. The book offers a breakdown of technical theatre, with discussions ranging from the various stages now available for productions to techniques in handling relationships with area designers. 1971 432 pp. $8.95 (68281-5)

THE ACTOR AT WORK

Robert Benedetti, Yale University

With techniques similar to Gestalt psychology (as used by the Essalen Institute), this text presents a program of discovery and development of the student's expressive behavior. It then applies this heightened and disciplined sense of expression to a thorough, detailed system of textual analysis based on the most recent organismic approaches to the literary text. All this is then related to the esthetics of a stage performance. 1970 177 pp. $6.50 (00365-7)

THEATRE IN HIGH SCHOOL:

PLANNING, TEACHING, DIRECTING

Charlotte Kay Motter, President of the California Educational Theatre Association and teacher at Canoga Park High School, Los Angeles

This text trains the prospective high school teacher or director of drama in the multiple aspects of the job: a philosophy of educational theatre, relationships with school and community, course content and materials, and production-direction information. The main strength of this new text is in its total coverage of all aspects of high school theatre production. 1970 187 pp. $6.95 (91301-2)

ALSO ANNOUNCING:

IT'S ONLY A MOVIE

Clark McKowen and William Sparke

Designed by Mel Byars

IT'S ONLY A MOVIE is a response-oriented text, with built-in motivation for thinking. The authors help students to appreciate the richness of the art of film through self-study: playing with possibilities, carrying out investigations and deriving their own insights. It is therefore a multi-level text, interesting to all readers but deeply revealing to synthesizing minds. March 1971 approx. 192 pp. paper $3.95 (50919-0) cloth $8.95 (50920-8)

AND OF INTEREST:

THE LANGUAGE OF FILM

Rod Whitaker, The University of Texas, Austin

Here is a book that examines all of the elements that contribute to the force and power of today's films. The author covers the visual, audio, narrative, histrionic, montage, and space and time manipulations that make a film work. 1970 178 pp. paper $4.95 (52282-1) cloth $7.25 (52283-9)

TWENTY PLAYS OF THE NO THEATRE

Edited with an introduction by DONALD KEENE

Illustrated. Cloth $15.00; paper $4.95

The Actors' Analects is a collection of advice and notes left by great actors of the live popular theater of Japan—the kabuki of the 17th century. Here is the theater gossip of the day: who is "sharing a pillow" with whom; managers berating playwrights; playwrights demanding equal billing; actors demanding vehicles for stardom—sometimes even stealing them. Their sharp criticism of each other's craft and life, both on and off the stage, provides an insight into the principles, mentality and aesthetics of the rise and development of a popular national theater.
