Protestant Thought

FROM ROUSSEAU TO RITSCHL

By KARL BARTH

One of the most challenging and influential Christian thinkers of the twentieth century presents a brilliant study of the European intellectual climate from the middle of the 18th to the middle of the 19th century. Each chapter introduces and analyzes a mold of modern thought: ROUSSEAU, LESSING, KANT, HERDER, NOVALIS, HEGEL, SCHLEIERMACHER, FEUERBACH, STRAUSS, and RITSCHL. The discussion of each man includes significant biographical details, a sympathetic presentation of his theological and philosophical ideas within the framework of his cultural environment, and an evaluation of his work, pointing out its limitations and permanent contributions.

"This is my favorite among Barth books. To see it in an English translation is a real joy to me." —PAUL TILlich $7.00

Sexual Relation in Christian Thought

By DERRICK SHERWIN BAILEY

This is the first full history of what Christian thinkers from Paul to Barth have had to say about the relations between the sexes. Based on tremendous research in theological literature, canon law and ecclesiastical controversy, it presents the evolving Christian viewpoint on the nature and ends of marriage, the value of virginity, divorce, second marriage, the celibacy of the clergy, etc.

Dr. Bailey traces the development of the Christian sexual tradition as a whole from the original blending of Jewish domesticity and Greek asceticism, through the rigorism of the Church fathers, the medieval synthesis, and the modifications of Luther and Calvin, to the contemporary understanding as influenced by the scientific findings in biology, anthropology and psychology. $4.50
