

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN CHINESE HISTORY, LITERATURE AND INSTITUTIONS

Wage Patterns and Wage Policy in Modern China 1919-1972

CHRISTOPHER HOWE

'... The work of a mature analytical mind, tightly reasoned and presented in a style free from both economic and revolutionary jargon. Like Dr. Howe's previous study, this volume states everything that needs saying in some 150 pages.

JOHN K. FAIRBANK:

"A first-rate addition to the literature on American policy and the Chinese revolution."

GEORGE F. KENNAN:

"An absolutely outstanding job of reporting."

BARBARA TUCHMAN:

"Service's series of conversations with Mao, Chou En-lai, Chu Teh, Lin Piao, and other leaders, embodied in vivid almost verbatim reports with perceptive comments, are a historical source of prime and unique importance."

"A valuable contribution to the cause of American diplomacy"

. . . Should be required reading in courses treating international relations, diplomacy, and the politics of wartime China . . . Highly recommended."

Land Taxation in Imperial China, 1750-1911

Yeh-chien Wang

Yeh-chien Wang provides a reliable estimate and an in-depth analysis of Imperial China's principal source of public revenue, the land tax, in the Ch'ing period. The approach used by the author is both institutional and quantitative as he studies how the land-tax system worked and how much revenue was produced from this source. Harvard East Asian Series, 73.

Chinese Ways in Warfare

Frank A. Kierman, Jr. and John K. Fairbank, editors

This volume of seven case studies provides a fascinating insight into an important aspect of Chinese life. It illustrates the richness and subtlety of the Chinese martial tradition, including the civilian containment of the military institution and the Chinese synthesis of psychology and maneuver evident from the Sun-tzu to Mao Tse-tung. In illuminating this different culture for the Western reader it also adds substance to the new comparative approach in history. Harvard East Asian Series, 74.

Pepper, Guns, and Parleys

The Dutch East India Company and China, 1662-1681

John E. Wills, Jr.

This detailed study in cross-cultural diplomacy examines the negotiations between the Dutch East India Company and the Manchu-Chinese Ch'ing Dynasty concerning their common enemy, the Cheng family, in the late 17th century. The author's conclusions suggest new perspectives on the Chinese diplomatic tradition. Harvard East Asian Series, 75.
