Corrections

Stanley Allen Renshon was listed as being formerly of CUNY, Lehman College. This should have been listed as a concurrent appointment with his appointment to the CUNY Graduate Center.

In the Letter to the Editor, PS on pages 449-50 by Glendon Schubert, two corrections as follows should be noted: page 449, 2nd column, 3rd line of 2nd paragraph, presentation should read preservation; also ibid., 15th line heading should read headings.

William E. Stevens, College of Steubenville, listed in Dissertations-in-Preparation, was incorrectly spelled. The correct spelling for his name should have been William E. Stephens.

Almon Leroy Way, Jr., University of South Carolina, listed in Dissertations-in-Preparation, was incorrectly spelled as Almond Leroy Way, Jr. The correct title of his dissertation is "The Role of the Governor in the State Legislative Process: A Case Study of South Carolina."

PS regrets the errors.

In Memoriam

Richard R. Warner

Richard Warner, Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Vermont, died of cancer at the age of forty-one. Professor Warner had received his B.A. and M.A. from the University of Kansas and his Ph.D. from American University.

Before entering academic life he served for eleven years in the Bureau of the Budget first as a budget examiner and later as a management analyst. During his academic years he devoted himself to the welfare of both students and colleagues and to the cause of social justice.

For Professor Warner, as he himself stated, a life lived only in the pursuit of its own self-interest was not fully human, a life lived only for its own comforts and careerist ambitions was only half a life.

Dick Warner believed that a political scientist should be political as well as scientific, a citizen of his society as well as a member of his profession. Warner spoke out on unsafe subjects and took unpopular positions. In protest of the Vietnam war he sat down in front of a bus at an induction center. He fought hard for a real, rather than a token, affirmative action program for Black students at UVM. He acted with vigor and courage on behalf of colleagues who were the subject of political oppression. He was regarded by many as the conscience of the
