

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

JEFFERY M. PAIGE is Professor of Sociology and Director of the Center for Research on Social Organizations at the University of Michigan. He has written extensively on the comparative study of revolutions and is currently working on a book on the role of the coffee elites in El Salvador, Costa Rica, and Nicaragua during the Central American crisis of the 1980s.

MARK THURNER is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Florida.

JOHN CHARLES CHASTEEN is an assistant professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His contributions to a new cultural history of Latin America include articles on nineteenth-century social behavior in Latin America. He is currently preparing a biography to be entitled Heroes on Horseback: The Saravia Brothers of Brazil and Uruguay.

HERNAN VIDAL is Professor of Latin American Literature and Comparative Studies in Discourse and Society at the University of Minnesota.

WALTER D. MIGNOLO is Professor in Romance Studies and the Graduate Program in Literature at Duke University. His work on colonial and postcolonial discourses includes The Darker Side of the Renaissance: Literacy, Territoriality, and Colonization, and two edited works, The Americas: Loci of Enunciation and Imaginary Construction and Writing without Words: Literacies in Mesoamerica and the Andes, the latter coedited with Elizabeth Hill Boone.

ROLENA ADORNO teaches Spanish American literary and cultural history at Princeton University, where she is a professor in the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures. She recently coedited with Kenneth Andrien Trans-Atlantic Encounters: Europeans and Andeans in the Sixteenth Century and wrote a critical introduction for a new edition of Irving Leonard's Book of the Brave.

PATRICIA SEED is currently completing a comparative history of European colonization and military conquest of the New World that will consider English, Spanish, French, Portuguese, and Dutch forms of colonialism. The introduction to this project, "Taking Possession and Reading Texts: Establishing the Authority of Overseas Empires," appeared in the William and Mary Quarterly in 1992 and won that journal's prize for best article of the year.

BARBARA TEDLOCK is a professor of anthropology at SUNY Buffalo who specializes in the history and ethnography of the Maya. In 1993 she received a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities and a grant-in-aid from the American Council of Learned Societies to translate, interpret, and publish a major eighteenth-century Mayan calendrical document known as the "Quiché Codes."

SUSAN E. RAMIREZ is Professor of History and Director of the Latin American Studies Program at De Paul University in Chicago. Her research interests include colonial Latin American social and economic history and Andean ethnohistory.

MARINA A. ÓBOROTOVA is a Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of World Economy and International Relations in Moscow. Specializing in U.S. and Russian policies in Latin America, she wrote The United States and Latin America, 1977–1988 (Moscow: Nauka, 1989) as well as numerous articles.

STEVE C. ROPP is Professor of Political Science and Director of International Studies at the University of Wyoming. His current research focuses on renewed patterns of authoritarianism in Latin America and Eastern Europe.

RICHARD L. HARRIS, Dean of the School of Management at Golden Gate University in San Francisco, is coordinating editor of Latin American Perspectives. His numerous publications on Latin America, include Marxism, Socialism, and Democracy in Latin America. He coedited two books on Nicaragua with Carlos Vilas.

PHILIP A. DENNIS is Professor of Anthropology at Texas Tech University. He has conducted fieldwork in Nicaragua and Mexico and wrote Intervillage Conflict in Oaxaca. He recently spent two years in Costa Rica as Director of Latin American Programs for the Associated Colleges of the Midwest.

PAUL C. SONDRÖL, Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs, has published numerous articles on Paraguay and Uruguay. He is writing a book on political liberalization in Paraguay, where he will be a Fulbright Scholar in 1993–94.

Uruguayan by birth, FRANCISCO PANIZZA studied in Brazil and England and teaches Latin American politics at the University of Essex. The author of Uruguay, Battlismo y después, he is studying democracy and human rights in Latin America.

Policing Rio de Janeiro

REPRESSION AND RESISTANCE IN A
NINETEENTH-CENTURY CITY

Thomas H. Holloway

The author shows how the historical development of the police of Rio de Janeiro was part of a general transition from the traditional application of control through public hierarchies to the modern exercise of power through public institutions. $45.00

The University System and Economic Development in Mexico Since 1929

David E. Lorey

This economic and social history of the relationship between the university system and development in Mexico uses original quantitative data on the graduates of all Mexican universities in a dozen major fields since 1929 to determine whether the Mexican university is in crisis. $37.50

Haciendas and Ayllus

RURAL SOCIETY IN THE BOLIVIAN
ANDES IN THE EIGHTEENTH AND NINETEENTH CENTURIES

Herbert S. Klein

Tracing in detail the long struggle between haciendas and self-governing Indian communities (ayllus), this first demographic study of rural Andean populations examines the changing social and economic structures developed by both landlords and peasants in response to economic change. $39.50

Stanford University Press

STANFORD, CA 94305-2235