

Barriers for the injured indigenous person to return to work

Howard Flavell

Northern Rehabilitation Network, Tiwi NT 0810, Australia. Howard.Flavell@nt.gov.au

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people carry a high disease burden with a consequent reduced life expectancy. There are reduced opportunities for conventional employment with further difficulties if the person has a disability. Nevertheless meaningful participation in community activities can occur. This paper will explore these issues giving examples of how this can be facilitated.