Law and Management Practices in International Organisations

edited by Chris de Cooker

This third supplement to International Administration: Law and Management Practices in International Organisations consists of one article, 'The Resolution of Staff Disputes before the European Court', written by E. Liam Mac Eachaidh.

In this text, the author brings a wide experience in industrial relations and law in common law jurisdictions to a study of employment disputes in the European Union civil service and their resolution in accordance with the Treaties and Staff Regulations by the European Court. The vast reported case law is discussed for the first time (up to July 1993), extracting the essential nature and principles of law developed by the Court of Justice and, after 1989, by the Court of First Instance.

In the course of the study, the author seeks to identify the nature of the European civil service and the nature of the public law principles developed by the Courts, as well as the difficulties inherent in the resolution of employment disputes by a strict judicial process. Consideration is given to the appellate jurisdiction and practice of the Court of Justice and there is wide reference to the European literature.

The text takes a close look at the functioning of the European Court in a particular context and will be of interest to students, academics and practitioners alike.
