KOREA

The Prehistory of Korea

by Jeong-hak Kim

translated by Richard J. Pearson and Kazue Pearson

Kim describes Korea's past from the Paleolithic Period to the Bronze Age, presenting detailed information from numerous Korean excavations. In addition to describing the sites and artifacts, he has made stylistic and typological groupings and used these to establish a chronology. Kim reveals that clear similarities exist between Korean artifact assemblages and those from Siberia and Japan. Of particular interest are the abundant Korean bronze artifacts of indigenous manufacture, presented in detail for the first time.
