

Editor's Note

We are pleased to announce that Albion will begin reviewing books concerning British history and politics in its eleventh volume which begins in June 1979. Professor R.J.Q. Adams of Texas A & M University, whose fine study of Lloyd George and the Ministry of Munitions was published last year, will be the editor for book reviews.

There is at present no convenient single place to which British historians can turn for comprehensive, scholarly, and timely book reviews in their field. Albion intends to provide this forum to serve the interests of our profession. This will require a large commitment of space, but we do not believe that it will cut down on our printing of articles and the proceedings of the Conference on British Studies.

Enclosed with this issue is a form that we invite you to fill up and return to Professor Adams at the Department of History, Texas A & M University, College Station, Texas 77843. We will, of course, need your help with this reviewing service. With these forms we should be better able to find the most appropriate reviewers from among our colleagues. If there is no form available, please write to Professor Adams, and provide him with a short scholarly vita and indicate by rank the fields in which you can review. Thanks.