Domestic abuse often begins or escalates during pregnancy, increasing the risk of adverse pregnancy outcomes and death of the woman and infant. Peacock and colleagues' educational article – Identifying, understanding and responding to domestic abuse in the perinatal period [pp. 192–197] – presents the experience of a woman who was abused during pregnancy. It describes how to facilitate a disclosure and conduct an assessment and illustrates safeguarding duties alongside interventions. Photo credit: istock.com / Thirawatana Phaisalratanarata
