Foreign & Policy Morality

Framework for a Moral Audit

Theodore M. Hesburgh
Louis J. Halle

Commentary: John C. Bennett, George F. Kennan,
John P. Armstrong, Philip C. Jessup,
E. Raymond Platig

Preface and Concluding Remarks:
Kenneth W. Thompson

Two acknowledged authorities, Father Theodore Hesburgh of Notre Dame and Professor Louis Halle of Geneva, approach the issue of morality in foreign policy from different viewpoints. Their differing views are then examined by leaders from different backgrounds — diplomats, professional ethicists, and public servants. The result is a searching examination of one of the perennial and profound issues of political life.

Statement of Purpose

The purpose of Worldview is to place public policies, particularly in international affairs, under close ethical scrutiny. The Council on Religion and International Affairs, which sponsors the journal, was founded in 1914 by religious and civic leaders brought together by Andrew Carnegie. It was mandated to work toward ending the barbarity of war, to encourage international cooperation, and to promote justice. The Council is independent and nonsectarian. Worldview is an important part of the Council's wide-ranging program in pursuit of these goals.

Worldview is open to diverse viewpoints and encourages dialogue and debate on issues of public significance. It is edited in the belief that large political questions cannot be considered adequately apart from ethical and religious reflection. The opinions expressed in Worldview do not necessarily reflect the positions of the Council. Through Worldview the Council aims to advance the national and international exchange without which our understanding will be dangerously limited.
