Law & Society Review Condensed Style Sheet

Type manuscripts double-spaced on one side of the paper only. While manuscripts need not conform to this style sheet at the time of submission, all manuscripts must include an abstract, footnotes, and a list of references, and all accepted manuscripts must be revised by the authors to conform to the Review's style. The rules listed below supplement the manuscript information on the inside front cover of the Review. Authors are urged to consult Review issues in volume 26 or later for further illustrations. A detailed style sheet is available from the Editorial Office.

- 1. Abstracts. All manuscripts should include an abstract of not more than 100 words. No abstracts are required for review essays or comments.
- 2. Footnotes. Footnotes should be numbered sequentially (except for the author's footnote) and printed on pages immediately following the text (not at the foot of the page). They should contain only substantive comments and additional references not immediately relevant to the text.
- 3. Tables and Figures. Tables should approximate the appearance of printed tables. Figures should be camera ready; provide originals, not xerographic copies. Tables and/or figures should be placed at the end of the text, after footnotes, appendixes, and references. Their location within the text should be indicated as follows:

Table 1 about here

4. Citations. All notes that consist merely of supporting citations should be placed in parentheses in the text. For example:

In a thoughtful essay, Hayden (1991) . . .

OR

Media stories often portray the civil jury as generous (Daniels & Martin 1986:236; Hans 1989: Huber 1988).

The same general rules apply to footnote text.

5. References. References are placed at the end of the manuscript following the footnotes. The list should contain only those sources actually cited in text or notes. Give authors' names as they appear in the original source. For more than one publication by the same author, list them in chronological order, with the older item first. For more than one publication in one year by the same author, use small (lower-case) letters to distinguish them (e.g., 1970a, 1970b).

All cases cited in text are listed under ""Cases Cited" following the References. All statutes cited are listed under ""Statutes Cited." For style for cases and statutes, see A Uniform System of Citation.

Human Rights, Gender Politics & Postmodern Discourses

Three themes stand out in this issue (Vol. 26, No. 1). The first is human rights violations as they apply within the U.S., in NATO's war in Kosovo, in Tibet, and $vis \ \dot{a} \ vis$ girl children and young women worldwide. The second centers on the contest over gender issues in social policy: the Christian Right's use of bible devotionals to promote an agenda that opposes women's reproductive rights, women's entry into the work force, and women's alternative lifestyle arrangements; the criminalization of mothers (mostly African American) for drug use; and legislative approaches to controlling hate crimes and reducing the incidence of certain male sex crimes by chemical castration. The final contributions expand on postmodern and chaos-theory research as it applies to conflict resolution and the confinement of the mentally ill.

LAW AND SOCIETY ASSOCIATION

The Law and Society Association has an international membership and is open to persons who are interested in the interdisciplinary study of law, society and legal processes. Members of the Association bring training in law, sociology, political science, psychology, anthropology, economics, history, and other related areas to better understand functioning legal systems in their social and historical context. Although they share a common commitment to developing theoretical and empirical understandings of law, members pursue widely varying interests. Whatever the issue, there is an openness in the Association toward exploring the contours of law through a variety of research methods and modes of analysis. The Annual Meeting draws participants from the U.S. and around the world. In 2001, the Association will meet jointly with the Research Committee on Sociology of Law (ISA) in Budapest, Hungary, July 4 - 7.

LSA is committed to the development of the field and to training new generations in law and society scholarship. Didactic workshops on research methods and workshop for graduate students take place just prior to the Annual Meeting each year, and for eight years a 5-day Summer Institute has been offered for advanced graduate students and faculty who are new to the field. Members of the Association and other leading scholars volunteer their teaching in these programs.

Membership in the Association is by calendar year and includes subscriptions to Law & Society Review and the LSA Newsletter.
