Psychological Medicine publishes original research in clinical psychiatry and the basic sciences related to it. These comprise not only the several fields of biological inquiry traditionally associated with medicine, but also the various psychological and social sciences whose relevance to medicine has become increasingly apparent. Editorials and commissioned review articles are published regularly. The journal also carries an extensive book review section.

Two monograph supplements to the journal will be published each year and will be sent free to subscribers. They may also be purchased separately. The current titles are:

1. Sex differences in psychological well-being
by MONICA BRISCOE (1982)
2. Long-term community care: experience in a London borough edited by J. K. WING (1982)
3. The alcoholic brain: CT scan and psychological findings
by MARIA A. RON (1983)
4. Psychiatric and social aspects of premenstrual complaint
by ANTHONY W. CLARE (1983)
5. Hypertension: psychological aspects and diagnostic impact in a clinical trial
by ANTHONY MANN (1984)
6. The effectiveness of attached social workers in the management of depressed female patients in general practice
by ROSLYN H. CORNEY (1984)
7. Sex differences in minor psychiatric morbidity
by RACHEL JENKINS (1985)
8. Handedness, language dominance and aphasia: a genetic model
by I. C. McMANUS (1985)
9. Minor psychiatric morbidity and general practice consultation: the West London Survey
by P. WILLIAMS, A. TARNOPOLSKY, D. HAND AND M. SHEPHERD (1986)
