The Leading British Musicological Quarterly

Edited by J. A. WESTRUP

Since its foundation in 1920, Music and Letters has combined exact scholarship with a high standard of literacy. Students and lovers of music have found and continue to find it an intelligent guide to the complex field of music, past and present. If you are not familiar with it, we suggest that you write and ask to see a specimen copy.

Mikrokosmos

Béla Bartók, who died in 1945, is acknowledged as one of the great creative spirits of the twentieth century. MIKROKOSMOS is a piano method in six volumes. A piano method, but something more: it is a course for the reading, playing and understanding of modern music, to be compared only with the teaching works of the great masters.

Here are 153 carefully graded pieces, beginning with the easiest of unison melodies within the range of five notes, and progressing to the most advanced grades. It is a work of amazing richness in every respect. All the technical problems of piano playing are covered, with astonishing invention and variety. Most aptly did its creator call it "MIKROKOSMOS". It is a whole world of music in miniature.
