The Effects of EU Citizenship

Economic, Social and Political Rights in a Time of Constitutional Change

by

Flora Goudappel

The notion of citizenship has undergone significant changes over the last few years because of European Union developments. Citizens have obtained additional economic, social and political rights but have also seen privacy and other rights limited because of the European fight against terrorism. Recent developments, such as the European Constitution and the Treaty of Lisbon, have aimed to change citizenship rights for European citizens and third-country nationals in the European Union. This book explores the influence of the EU on citizenship rights, especially in view of the fight against terrorism and the constitutional changes negotiated in the last decade. It is highly recommended to academics, policy makers, civil servants and those interested in EU Citizenship.

Flora Goudappel is Associate Professor of European Union Law at Erasmus School of Law in Rotterdam, the Netherlands.

Information Technology & Law Series 18

Universities and Copyright Collecting Societies

by

Dinusha Kishani Mendis

This book is the first to carry out an in-depth study into the interaction between Universities and Copyright Collecting Societies (CCS) in the UK in the light of technological advances. It also considers a case-study into the Copyright Licensing Agency and looks into the licensing system under the Higher Education Copying Accord (HECA). In particular, the development of the HECA licences, including the most recent Comprehensive Digital Licence which came in to effect in 2008, is discussed. In highlighting the gaps which are prevalent in the present system, this work questions whether the academic author is properly remunerated by CCS. A new model based on the HERON project and open-access system is proposed for equitable remuneration for the academic author, publisher and CCS in an online world.

Dinusha K. Mendis is a Lecturer in Law at the Lancashire Law School, Centre for Law Information and Converging Technologies, University of Central Lancashire, UK.
