JUDAISM AND THE EARLY CHRISTIAN MIND

A Study of Cyril of Alexandria's Exegesis and Theology

ROBERT L. WILKEN

After tracing the relationships between Christians and Jews during the first four centuries A.D., Mr. Wilken demonstrates how Cyril's exegetical writings—two-thirds of the extant corpus—grew directly out of his polemical positions. His concluding analysis of the larger problem of Christian attitudes toward the Jews concentrates on the difficulties raised by the Christian's inability to understand Judaism as anything other than an inferior foreshadow of Christianity. 264 pages £3.95

Paul Tillich's Dialectical Humanism

Unmasking the God above God

LEONARD F. WHEAT

Paul Tillich is considered by some a creative Christian, by others an essentially non-Christian metaphysician, and by still others an atheist. Dr. Wheat argues that Tillich is an uncompromising atheist who quite deliberately concealed the real substance of his message in an analogical code that enabled him like Saint Paul, to be "all things to men."

Russell and Moore: The Analytical Heritage

A. J. Ayer

This major work by one of the world's leading philosophers is the outcome of the William James lectures which Professor Ayer gave in the spring of 1970. The lectures form a critical study of the two great philosophers who founded the analytical movement in twentieth century philosophy, Bertrand Russell and G. E. Moore. The five lectures which are devoted to Russell cover his philosophy of logic, with special emphasis on his famous theory of descriptions, his logical atomism, his theory of knowledge and his conception of reality. The four lectures on Moore are mainly concerned with his attempt to refute Idealism, his defence of common sense, his treatment of abstract entities and his concept of philosophical analysis.

THE CHURCH AND THE SECULAR ORDER IN REFORMATION THOUGHT

JOHN M. TONKIN

Basic contrasts in the views of Luther, Calvin, and Menno Simons on the relation of the institutional Church to the secular world are shown to explain the three Reformers' different interpretations of the characteristics and the destiny of the institutional Church. "I think the most important contribution this dissertation makes is to present the thought of Menno Simons in such a clear way and in such helpful juxtaposition to Calvin and Luther. Mr. Tonkin has written one of the best essays on Menno Simons that I have ever seen."—Harvey Cox, the Divinity School, Harvard University.

PHILOSOPHICAL BOOKS

Philosophical Books, edited by Professor J. Kemp, was started in 1960 with the object of assisting librarians and individuals in the choice of books in the field of philosophy. Reviews in the professional journals often appear some considerable time after the publication of the book, while reviews in the general weeklies are often inadequate in length and in quality for professional purposes. The aim of Philosophical Books is to provide reviews that are both reasonably prompt and of a high professional standard. Reviews are normally between 300 and 1,000 words in length, though they are occasionally longer. The journal appears three times a year, in January, May and October. Paper covered. 36 pp. Subscription £1.00. ($2.40) per year. Single copies 35p.

TOWARDS PEACE IN MIND AND HEALTH IN BODY O. J. Kenward

"This book is based entirely upon Fellowship of Meditation teaching. It is written, not for our own members already conversant with the subject, but in the hope of its being stocked by libraries and booksellers and thus winning new adherents." O. J. Kenward.

A simple way of physical healing and of succour in life generally, has been in use during a period of time, and by large numbers of people, to justify wider interests in it. The object of this book is to encourage all and sundry to try out a method for themselves. It requires no special or intellectual gifts, nor the individual powers of professional "healers". Its strongest recommendation is that, faithfully followed, the method has proved efficacious in the lives of its adherents.

HEGEL'S Philosophy of Nature

translated, annotated and introduced by

Michael John Petry

The definitive translation of the second part of Hegel's
ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF THE PHILOSOPHICAL SCIENCES.

'... it carries an immense weight of learning and when taken along with the voluminous notes, stretching to almost 500 pages in all, constitutes a quite remarkable achievement.

His vast edition, quite apart from its value to philosophers, will remain an important document for this period of the history of science for many years to come.' The Times Literary Supplement

The book will revolutionize the general view of Hegel. It reveals that he was intimately acquainted with all the natural sciences of his day. Only Aristotle can match him in depth, accuracy and range of empirical knowledge. Here are new insights into the nature and origin of the categories assessed in the 'Logic' and the nature of the dialectic.

An Introduction to Western Philosophy

IDEAS AND ARGUMENT FROM PLATO TO SARTRE

ANTONY FLEW

BASIC TEXTBOOKS of philosophy tend to be of two kinds: either collected and edited readings from classical sources, or else elementary introductions. In this book Antony Flew has combined and integrated these two methods, interspersing his own admirably clear and fair-minded text with readings from the classical philosophers whenever they seemed to have something especially good to say. The book is designed as an introduction to the subject on lines suitable for a set book for first courses in philosophy. Only a minority of its readers, however, will be going on to graduate in philosophy: the majority will be those who want to make the acquaintance of the subject, to add to their mental equipment without, necessarily, any thought of further study. It is with this majority in mind that Professor Flew has stressed the relevance of philosophy to other interests and disciplines, and has also described (and nicknamed) various intellectual malpractices against which an introduction to philosophy will serve as an antidote. He begins with Plato's Theory of Forms and ends with existentialism, the ideas of the young Marx, and the so-called linguistic philosophy; and in between he has something to say about, and gives a say to, almost all the major Western philosophers from Descartes to Bertrand Russell.

Antony Flew is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Keele.

Professor Flew's book can justly be called monumental A genuine and useful introduction.' The Listener.
