FROM COLONIALISM TO WORLD COMMUNITY

John Coventry Smith . . . Presbyterian missionary to Japan . . . Secretary of COEMAR . . . Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly . . . President of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches . . . Ecumenical statesman . . .

John Coventry Smith helped to shape the church's concept of itself against a backdrop that included World War II and internment in a Japanese prison camp, the Korean and Vietnam wars, the civil rights movement, and the emergence of Third World nations. A fascinating recollection of four change-filled decades.

The Victorian “Lives” of Jesus

by Daniel L. Pals

A provocative and perceptive study that draws a neglected literature out of the shadows and into its own native light.

The study of Jesus by critical historians dates chiefly from the scholarly investigations of the nineteenth century. Many recall the contributions of the German scholars to this inquiry, yet few remember that during these years Britain also developed a keen interest in the historical life of Jesus. Those who led the Victorian quest — virtually unknown today — wrote books whose profile blended traditional piety, antiquarian romance, publishers’ needs, popular appeal, and scholarly reserve. Britain’s “Lives” offer an unexpected insight into the Victorian mind and explain why religious learning in the Isles traveled a different path from that on the continent.

Trinity University Monograph Series in Religion VII, Cloth $20.00.

“Mr. Pals has produced an immensely learned book, and, though even specialist scholars may not be inclined at first to find his topic engaging, one marvels at how deeply his account of the lives of Jesus produced in the English nineteenth century takes us into the religious situation of the Victorian period. Indeed, it is a consistently fascinating narrative, and one that very greatly enriches the literature of scholarship on the Victorian scene.” Nathan A. Scott, Jr., University of Virginia

“(This book) investigates a virtually unexplored area and is a valuable contribution to the history of Victorian England, as well as to the history of modern New Testament scholarship and historical Christology.” Carl R. Holladay, Emory University

“Every generation rewrites its history because of changing perspectives on the past. Biography is no exception to this rule, and crucial topics are particularly revealing in the way they show how different generations relate to a perennial theme. This volume focuses on one of the most powerful of such themes: the life of Christ. Its author has mastered the most sophisticated techniques of biblical scholarship and uses that knowledge to measure earlier developments in its cumulative development. His choice of Lives of Jesus is particularly fruitful too, because they embody a nexus not only of the state of biblical criticism but of theological priorities at a given time and of popular religion in public life as well. By mid-nineteenth century, British culture was absorbing the advances of historical consciousness, and it drew on increased archeological knowledge of ancient civilizations plus more frequent travels to the Holy Land. All these factors produced a reading public eager to consume Lives that drew on both a quest for historical accuracy and a religious message of pious edification. The author’s broad sensitivity to Victorian culture leads him to study these books as mirrors of the popular mind. His greatest strength is to see these Lives of Jesus as a combination of science and religion, a blend of scholarship and piety that was perhaps unique to Great Britain a century ago. His resulting study sheds light on a facet of English culture that has remained virtually unnoticed until now.” Henry W. Bowden, Rutgers University

PHILIP SCHAFF PRIZE

The American Society of Church History takes pleasure in announcing the 1981–82 Philip Schaff Prize. The prize is in the amount of $1,000.00 to be paid to the author of the best book originating in the North American scholarly community and presenting original research or interpretation in the history of Christianity or any period thereof.

Books considered for this award must be published during the years 1981 or 1982. Any member of the Society may nominate titles for consideration for the Schaff Prize. Copies of books do not have to be submitted. Titles nominated for consideration of the award must be received by the chairperson of the Committee on Research of the Society or William B. Miller, Secretary, American Society of Church History, 305 East Country Club Lane, Wallingford, PA 19086, by 1 March 1983. The announcement of the winner of the Schaff Prize will be made at the annual meeting of the Society in December 1983.

The 1979–1980 winner of the Philip Schaff Prize was The Age of Reform, 1250–1550: An Intellectual and Religious History of Late Medieval and Reformation Europe, by Steven Ozment (Yale University Press).
