I. ETHICS AND FOREIGN POLICY SERIES

This series of brief essays, ranging from 25 to 100 pages, develops no single point of view. It is, in fact, designed to draw upon those major traditions, moral and political, which form our common heritage. They are united, however, in their essential concern, for each places some contemporary problem in an ethical perspective, testing both our understanding of the immediate problem and the conventional framework in which we have tended to view such problems. The authors are all at home in their respective disciplines and as much at home in the vexed area of ethics and political judgment as that cross discipline allows. 50¢ each

II. SPECIAL STUDIES

(Individually priced as shown)

- #201. THE MORAL DILEMMA OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS: Essays from Worldview William Clancy, Ed.
This first series of essays from Worldview brings together political scientists, theologians, military analysts and journalists in a single discussion. The only common criterion is the attempt to respond to the dilemma of nuclear weapons in a way that is "morally responsible and politically wise." 78 pp. $1.50
- #202. PEACE, THE CHURCHES AND THE BOMB James Finn, Ed.
In this study, the issues and problems raised by the preliminary statement on nuclear arms, discussed in the third session of Vatican Council II, are clarified and refined so that agreement, or disagreement, may be as precise as possible. 103 pp. $2.00
- #205. U.S. POLICY IN THE FAR EAST: Ideology, Religion and Superstition Jerald C. Brauer, Kenneth W. Thompson, Hans J. Morgenthau
In an attempt to separate the ephemeral from the more enduring values and the diverting from the useful concept, three distinguished members of the CRIA Board of Trustees discuss U.S. policy in the Far East. 64 pp. $1.75
- #206. AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY AND MORAL RHETORIC: The Example of Vietnam David Little
Dr. Little examines the tradition of "liberal disillusionment" as it shapes criticism about U.S. foreign policy generally and Vietnam in particular. 177 pp. $1.75
- #207. THE RIGHT TO KNOW, TO WITHHOLD AND TO LIE William J. Barnds
With commentary by Wilson Carey McWilliams, Daniel C. Maguire, Paul W. Blackstock
A former member of the C.I.A., Mr. Barnds considers the need for intelligence, current espionage practices, and the moral ambiguities posed by such activities in a democratic society. 87 pp. $1.75
- #208. ETHICS, VIOLENCE AND REVOLUTION Charles C. West
With commentary by Ernest W. Lefever, Monika Hellwig
Dr. West seeks to demonstrate how our perception of reality, as influenced by religious concepts, determines our attitude toward any particular revolutionary ethos. 72 pp. $1.75
- #209. THE OBLIGATION TO DISOBEY: Conscience and the Law Mulford Q. Sibley
Is the law to be obeyed in all circumstances, or is there sometimes an obligation to challenge and disobey the law? Dr. Sibley examines this question of immediate importance in legal, philosophic and moral terms. 119 pp. $1.75
- #210. "STORY" IN POLITICS Michael Novak
With commentary by Tran Van Dinh, David Little, Daniel C. Maguire, Theodore R. Weber
Dr. Novak offers a critique of politics based on the way Americans misperceive their own cultural first principles and misjudge the real situations with which they must deal. His example is Vietnam. 120 pp. $1.75
- #211. IS AMERICA BECOMING MILITARIZED? Charles Wolf, Jr., Roger Fisher, Alan Geyer
One aspect of our foreign policy that has elicited deep concern in other countries as well as our own is the role of the military. From three strikingly different yet authoritative viewpoints, the authors examine and discourse on the many sides of this pressing question. 68 pp. $1.75
- #212. PUBLIC POLICY AND THE EXPERT: Ethical Problems of the Witness Daniel D. McCracken
With commentary by Bruce Arden, Victor C. Ferkiss, Roger L. Shinn
Are the complexities of modern technology incompatible with the democratic process? What are the problems an expert must cope with in giving testimony? Mr. McCracken, a computer expert, writes from personal experience and professional knowledge. 128 pp. $1.75
- #213. MILITARY HONOR AFTER MYLAI Wilson Carey McWilliams
With commentary by Josiah Bunting, David Little, William V. O'Brien
Dr. McWilliams discusses the philosophic and political assumptions underlying the tragedy at Mylai and suggests how citizens—and soldiers as citizens—have a responsibility in shaping military policy and conferring honor. 72 pp. $1.75

"Since we are prosecutors as well as defendants, we have been tempted to drop the charges and to lower the voice of outrage to a timorous whisper. But that murmur will be insistent and eventually maddening; nations, as well as individuals, can be pursued by the Furies. The accusations must be taken up and examined, for they reflect an inescapable crisis in our political life which taints the present and threatens the future."

—WILSON CAREY McWILLIAMS

"Senior American officers of the Vietnam period are badly understood and their moral stature generally underestimated."

—JOSIAH BUNTING

"Before we can make sense of the notion 'moral crime,' we must first clear up our understanding of 'moral.' Once that task is done, we would be better able to see the specific ways that 'moral crime' is both like and different from 'legal crimes' and 'political crimes.'"

—DAVID LITTLE

"The military must be honest with themselves before they can aspire to honor from their own perspective. There is ample evidence that the military has not been sufficiently honest with itself in recent years."

—WILLIAM V. O'BRIEN
