

CONVENTIONS AND ABBREVIATIONS

Translations

Unless otherwise indicated, translations are my own. I have generally preferred to use the Latinised form of Greek names.

Conventions

I employ the following conventions within the text:

Boldface type highlights indices of allusion.

Underlining indicates words of interest, especially verbal parallels.

Where multiple parallels are indicated simultaneously, I employ a different form of underlining for each parallel.

The grapheme ~ marks a verbal/thematic parallel and/or an intertextual relation between different passages.

I use ‘Homer’ to refer to the constructed author of the Iliad and Odyssey, even if there are grave uncertainties regarding the historicity of this figure, and I refer to the Theognidea without taking a position on authenticity (thus ‘Thgn.’, never ‘[Thgn.]’).

In the main text, I include scholars’ first names only on their first mention. In citations, I provide scholars’ initials only where the date of a publication would otherwise cause ambiguity, for example to distinguish M. L. West (2012) and S. R. West (2012).

Abbreviations

Abbreviations of journals generally follow L’Année Philologique, except for the occasional shortening (AJP not AJPh, BMCR not BMCRRev etc.) and the following additions:
