SPIRIT, SOUL, and FLESH

(HISTORICAL AND LINGUISTIC STUDIES IN LITERATURE RELATED TO THE NEW TESTAMENT, SECOND SERIES, VOLUME III)

By ERNEST D. BURTON

PROFESSOR AND HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT OF NEW TESTAMENT AND EARLY
CHRISTIAN LITERATURE, THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

From the publication of his Syntax of the Moods and Tenses in New Testament Greek over twenty years ago, to the present time, Professor Burton has been known to workers in the field of New Testament interpretation on both sides of the Atlantic. His contributions to New Testament science have been specially marked by exhaustive induction and exactness of statement. The present monograph grows out of the author's conviction that the achievement of assured results in New Testament interpretation and New Testament theology demands a re-study of many of the problems of New Testament lexicography. The three terms dealt with in this monograph—"spirit," "soul," and "flesh"—have often been discussed but never quite satisfactorily, remaining still the occasion of no little difficulty to the interpreter. By a practically exhaustive examination of the terms as they appear in Greek literature for more than a millennium, from Homer to Sextus Empiricus in the second century A.D., together with a similarly thorough treatment of their Hebrew equivalents, Professor Burton lays a broad foundation for an authoritative judgment as to the ideas represented by them in the New Testament. Inasmuch as his conclusions affect the interpretation of many of the most significant passages of the New Testament and the definition of some of the most fundamental conceptions of its writers, particularly of the apostle Paul, the book is indispensable not only to all libraries consulted by New Testament interpreters but to all thorough students of the Greek New Testament.

The Philosophy of Wang Yang-Ming

By Frederick Goodrich Henke, Ph.D.

Introduction by Professor James H. Tufts, Univ. of Chicago

The Philosophy of Wang Yang-Ming is an important book for readers interested in philosophy and in Chinese thought. Here we have a prominent Chinese thinker represented in an English translation of his works, including a life of the author and an appreciation of his theories. This instance will introduce us to the mode of thought of Chinese philosophers, and will prove interesting not only to sinologists, but also to specialists in philosophy and to historians of human thought, who naturally will compare the development of philosophical thought in the West with similar tendencies in the East.

Wang Yang-Ming was an idealist of the monistic type. For him mind covered the entire gamut of existence; he thought that nothing existed independent and apart from mind. This seems to be very theoretical, but our author represents a most practical philosophy, for he believes that there can be no real knowledge without action. In many respects he reminds one of Kant. He believes that the individual has within himself the spring of knowledge, and should constantly carry into practice the things that his intuitive knowledge of good gives him opportunity to do.

HENRY WILDER FOOTE

The Harvard Theological Review is an undenominational theological quarterly, established by the aid of the bequest of Miss Mildred Everett, daughter of Reverend Charles Carroll Everett, D.D., Bussey Professor of Theology in the Harvard Divinity School, 1869–1900, and Dean of the School, 1878–1900.

The Review aims to include discussions in the various fields of theological study, and also in the history of religions, ethics, education, economics, and sociology, in their theological and religious aspects. It is designed to serve the needs not only of clergymen and scholars, but of all who are interested in religious thought and in the place and function of religion in modern life.

Remittances and communications on business matters should be addressed to the Director of the Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Massachusetts.
