

LITERATURE AND REVOLUTION

A Critical Study of the Writer and Communism in the Twentieth Century

*Jurgen Ruhle * Translated and edited by Jean Steinberg*

After World War I, many writers turned to Russia in the hope of a new and better world. But with Stalin's ascent to power, the outbreak of another savage war, and the imposition of Soviet rule on conquered countries, hope changed to fear. In this brilliant study, Jurgen Ruhle, a noted German political commentator and literary critic, examines the work of writers such as Pasternak, Brecht, Mann, Gorky, Sholokhov, Silone, Malraux, Hemingway, Neruda, Lorca, and Tagore in this invaluable discussion of the relationship between totalitarianism and the writer. "A major critical feat . . . indispensable."—Library Journal.

RUSSIA'S UNDERGROUND POETS

Edited by Keith Bosley

Introduction by Janet Sapiets

During the past forty years, Soviet writers have been faced with a clearly defined choice: to conform and be accepted, or to rebel and become outcasts. Those who are convinced that they are the true heirs to Russia's artistic legacy publish their works at home and abroad in defiance of all attempts to stop them. The poems in this volume, selected from a variety of underground publications, celebrate life rather than Socialist Realism. The forty-one poets represented—including Pasternak, Okudzhava, Slutsky, Akhmadulina, and Brodsky—can be admired both for their work and for their stubborn courage. 120 pp.
