THE CHINA QUARTERLY

In the summer of 1962, a group of Chinese and Western scholars met under this journal's sponsorship at the Ditchley Foundation near Oxford to discuss Chinese Communist literature. This meeting, the first of its kind in the Western world, prompted the writing of a number of papers that we consider extremely interesting and which are to be published, together with an analysis of the discussions at Ditchley, in the January-March issue of The China Quarterly.

The articles include:

- ★ The Persistence of Traditional Forms
- ★ Chinese Communist War Stories
- ★ Residual Femininity: Women in Fiction

A STUDY OF POLYANDRY

by

H.R.H. PRINCE PETER OF GREECE AND DENMARK

1963. 601 pp., 48 figs., 48 genealogical tables, 6 maps. Cloth.

This study of polyandry has been undertaken in order to obtain greater anthropological knowledge of a little known custom. In the examination of the theoretical background, four primary questions are asked: 1) Does polyandry really exist? 2) If so, what are the distribution and incidence of polyandry? 3) How does polyandry function? 4) What are the reasons for (or correlates of) polyandry? A comparative review of the existing material available on the subject given.

The ethnographic study begins with a summary of peoples reported polyandrous and only briefly investigated by the author, in India and Ceylon. There are more detailed accounts of the polyandry of the Thandans (Tiyas), Kammalans and other artisan castes of Kerala, of the Todas of the Nilgiris, and especially of the Tibetans, both of Western Tibet and of Tibet proper.

The resultant conclusions provide the answers to the questions initially asked in the examination of the theoretical background. These replies are obtained by a comparative analysis of the evidence, from both the existing material on the subject and from the material supplied by the ethnographic study.

In the final chapter, an anthropological theory of polyandry is presented, a working hypothesis which attempts to account for the emergence of polyandry among the peoples studied.

This is followed by some theoretical considerations embodied in a conclusion, by two appendixes which contain, the one, a narrative of the journeys made by the author, the other, acknowledgements, and by a bibliography.

Photographs taken, in the main, by the author, charts and maps, serve to illustrate the work throughout.
