Department of Educational Theatre

For the first time,
a department
specifically oriented to educational theatre —set within the context and living functions of a great school of education.

In September 1967 New York University's School of Education will begin a full-scale program for students who wish to teach drama and theatre on the primary and secondary levels, or children's theatre and creative dramatics.

Complementing the work to be done by New York University's Theatre Program with its emphasis on professional training, and its Graduate School Program in Dramatic Literature, Theatre History, and Cinema, the Department of Educational Theatre (formerly the Department of Dramatic Art) will concentrate its work in the areas of

- creative dramatics
- children's theatre
- research in educational theatre

B.S., A.M., Ed.D., and Ph.D. degrees will be offered in these fields.

Most of the current offerings of the Department of Dramatic Art will be given for the transitional year of 1966-1967.

ANTON CHEKHOV

IVANOV

English version by Sir John Gielgud

The highly successful London production of this play proved that it "... remains a work of genius to which audiences starved of human feeling may come for replenishment."—The Times, London. This Spring, Sir John Gielgud and Vivien Leigh will recreate on Broadway this drama about a provincial neurotic who reacts to the approaching death of his first wife by preparing to marry a second. $1.85

JOHN WHITING author of The Devils

"The Theatre needs Whiting. He was the first of the innovators, a glorious position but perilous. He has a delicate and troubled mind that is nevertheless fundamentally robust. He has a sense of humor and terror. He knows the violence of the age, and the forces that underlie it."—Harold Hobson, The Sunday Times (London)

MARCHING SONG

"Startling, tantalizing . . . I found myself hanging on every word."—N. Y. Herald Tribune. $1.75

A PENNY FOR A SONG

"Probably the maddest mix-up of off-center people . . . even so, there is seriousness underneath."—Dramatics Magazine $1.75

SAINT'S DAY

This play created a furor when produced in London as much for its Web-sterian detail as its theme of self-destruction. $1.75

The Play Called Corpus Christi

V. A. Kolve. In this critical study of the Corpus Christi drama, the chief interest is in genre, form, and meaning. The drama held the stage for more than two hundred years, testifying to a remarkable vitality in the form and its detail. The author's goal has been to understand the plays in their own time, to discover what a medieval dramatist might have put in his text, and what a medieval audience might have understood in seeing the play staged. He has drawn heavily on popular religious literature contemporary with the Corpus Christi drama.

June. About $8.50

Modern Tragedy

Raymond Williams. Part I is a critical examination of the essential ideas of tragedy as they have evolved in different periods of history and different societies. Part II is a series of essays on modern tragic literature from Ibsen to Sartre. Among the authors discussed are Tolstoy, Strindberg, Lawrence, O'Neill, Eliot, Brecht, Ionesco, Pasternak, and Tennessee Williams. The critical temper of the essays is as much moral as technical and historical, for the author shows how the three major new systems of thought—Marxism, Freudianism, and Existentialism—are all, in their most common forms, tragic. $5.50

DRAMAS FROM THE AMERICAN THEATRE, 1762-1909

By Professor Richard Moody, Indiana University

An unusual anthology of 26 plays, selected for their reflection of the social and political circumstances of the times, this book constitutes a valuable contribution to the history of the American theatre. Each play is introduced by a critical essay which provides pertinent biographical and theatrical details to establish its place in the development of the American drama.

Selected volumes on great dramatists in the TWENTIETH CENTURY VIEWS Series

The best in critical opinion on major authors. Maynard Mack, Yale University, Series Editor. Each volume paper $1.95, cloth $3.95

G. B. SHAW edited by R. J. Kaufmann, University of Rochester. "Shaw's Integral Theater," by G. Wilson Knight, "The Making of a Dramatist (1892-1903)," by Eric Bentley, and "The Conflict of Wills in Shaw's Tragicomedy," by Norbert F. O'Donnell, among other essays, analyze Shaw's theatrical technique.

IBSEN edited by Rolf Fjelde, Pratt Institute. Essays such as "Ibsen as a Stage Craftsman," by P. F. D. Tennant, and "The Unexpected Visitor in Ibsen's Late Plays," by Richard Schechner are among the works which have uncovered fresh sources of vitality beneath the clichés surrounding Ibsen.

SAMUEL BECKETT edited by Martin Esslin, British Broadcasting Corporation. Alain Robbe-Grillet's "Samuel Beckett, or 'Presence' in the Theatre," and Gunther Anders' "Being without Time: On Beckett's Play Waiting for Godot," are among those which analyze the theatrical effects of Beckett's dramas and the changing shapes of the Beckett persona.

SHAKESPEARE:

THE COMEDIES edited by Kenneth Muir, University of Liverpool.

THE HISTORIES edited by Eugene M. Waith, Yale University.

THE TRAGEDIES edited by Alfred Harbage, Harvard University.

The vision of a great dramatist is explored in such writings as "Themes and Structure in The Comedy of Errors," (COMEDIES), "Falstaff and the Prince," (HISTORIES), and "Iago Revisited," (TRAGEDIES)

MARLOWE edited by Clifford Leech, University of Toronto. Essays such as "Tamburlaine's Passions," by Roy W. Battenhouse and "The Damnation of Faustus," by W. W. Greg, hail the dramas of Christopher Marlowe as subtle, complex works of great excellence.

O'NEILL edited by John Gassner, Yale University. The findings of eminent drama critics, scholars, and theater professionals on O'Neill are presented in essays including "Anna Christie: Her Fall and Rise," "Trying to Like O'Neill," and "O'Neill's Search for a 'Language of the Theatre.'"

MOLIÈRE edited by Jacques Guicharnaud, Yale University. "The Actor," by René Bray, and "The Unreconstructed Heroes of Molière," by Robert J. Nelson are among the essays.

YEATS edited by John Unterecker, Columbia University. These essays, among them "Yeats" by T. S. Eliot and "Faces and False Faces" by John Unterecker analyze Yeats as poet, playwright, and man of letters.

BRECHT edited by Peter Demetz, Yale University. In "Brecht's Dramatic Theory," and "On Brecht's In the Swamp, A Man's a Man, and Saint Joan of the Stockyards," Hans Egon Holthusen and Eric Bentley among others study Brecht in his roles as dramatist, poet, and director.

CAMUS edited by Germaine Brée, University of Wisconsin. Albert Camus is studied in essays such as "Camus as Dramatist," Henry Popkin, and "The World of the Man Condemned to Death," Rachel Bepaloff.

LORCA edited by Manuel Durán, Yale University. A collection of essays including "Lorca's Theater," by Angel del Rio, and "Humor in the Plays of Fed. Garcia Lorca," by Susan Smith Blackburn.

SARTRE edited by Edith Kern, University of Washington. "The Structure of Existence: The Files," and "Les Séquestrés D'Altona," are two of the essays discussing Jean-Paul Sartre's work.

T. S. ELIOT edited by Hugh Kenner, University of California at Santa Barbara. Eliot's impressive achievements in poetry and drama are examined in essays such as "The Cocktail Party," by Denis Donoghue and "Murder in the Cathedral," by John Peter.

Spectrum  Books paper $1.95, cloth $3.95
