“ . . . whatever his or her native tongue, the tropical ecologist will ignore

The Journal of Tropical Ecology

at their peril”
Stephen Sutton, THES

Published by INTECOL and the ICSU Press by Cambridge University Press

The Journal of Tropical Ecology provides an attractive forum for the dissemination of information and the exchange of ideas. The Journal publishes papers of high scientific merit in the general field of ecology of tropical regions, devoted either to the results of original research, experimental or descriptive, or forming significant reviews. Short communications and notes are also published, encouraging discussion between readers.

Essential Reading for:

The Journal of Tropical Ecology is aimed not only at academics, but at all those interested in the biology of the tropics:

- agriculturalists
- foresters
- development planners
- conservationists
- wildlife biologists
