MORALITY AND AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY

ROBERT W. McELROY

Confronting the Costs of ## WAR

MILITARY POWER,
STATE, AND SOCIETY
IN EGYPT AND ISRAEL

Michael N. Barnett

Most international relations specialists since World War II have assumed that morality plays only the most peripheral role in the making of substantive foreign policy decisions. Robert McElroy shows that moral norms can, and do, significantly affect international affairs by their influence on individual decisionmakers, domestic public opinion, and national reputation abroad.

"I know of no work that does quite as well as this one in demonstrating the effect that moral norms have on American foreign policy—some of the time, in certain situations. . . . none of us who study international politics should pass up the opportunity to read this carefully crafted set of case studies that shows how moral norms can have political significance."

—Michael W. Doyle, Princeton University

Cloth: $24.95 ISBN 0-691-08621-4

Due April 1992

What determines the strategies by which a state mobilizes resources for war? And does war preparation strengthen or weaken the state in relation to society? In looking at these questions, Michael Barnett develops a novel theoretical framework that traces the connection between war preparation and changes in state-society relations, and applies that framework to Egypt from 1952 to 1977 and Israel from 1948 through 1977.

"Barnett does a masterful job of weaving together the literatures in international political economy, security studies, and state and society. The result is a theoretical contribution that is fresh and refreshing. The chapters on Egypt and Israel are rich and illuminating."

THE WORLD TODAY, established in 1945, is the monthly journal of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, Chatham House, London. It is a unique magazine of international politics. It covers the broad issues alongside the small ones. It covers the politics of countries that are not in the headlines today, but could be there tomorrow. It opens up questions for the scholar and fills in gaps for the general reader. And it takes a balanced point of view. The experts seem to agree.

'THE WORLD TODAY is thoroughly researched and clearly written. It provides valuable background information and its choice of subjects is catholic and intelligent.'

Rupert Pennant-Rea, Editor of The Economist

'THE WORLD TODAY is topical, to the point, a good halfway house between daily and weekly press and academic journals. I read it for useful background and insights.'

Andrew Knight, Chief Executive of The Daily Telegraph

'THE WORLD TODAY taps the best available expertise on international subjects. I recommend it to anyone who wants a greater depth and specialist expertise on a range of topics of current interest.'

The first realistic, business view of sustainable development

CHANGING COURSE

A GLOBAL BUSINESS PERSPECTIVE ON DEVELOPMENT AND THE ENVIRONMENT

STEPHAN SCHMIDHEINY

WITH THE BUSINESS COUNCIL FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Are industry and the environment incompatible? These analyses and case studies by major business leaders show how companies and governments can make ecological imperatives part of the market forces that govern production, investment, and trade.

"The question is no longer whether business must change to meet the challenges of the global environment, or even when. The issue of the 1990s is how, and Changing Course lays out the most forward-looking guidelines in print for harnessing the resources of the modern corporation to the task of environmentally sustainable development. This timely book is nothing less than a roadmap to the corporate future."

— James Gustave Speth, President, World Resources Institute

"One of the most important challenges confronting the global community today is to change the mindset with which we view the relationship between the environment and economic development. As Changing Course demonstrates, a growing number of business and government leaders are finding ways to produce simultaneously both economic development and a cleaner, safer environment."

— Michael R. Deland, Chairman, President's Council on Environmental Quality
