The Spirit of the Oxford Movement

Tractarian Essays

Owen Chadwick

In this collection Owen Chadwick, perhaps the most distinguished living historian of religion, writes on various aspects of the Oxford Movement and the English Church in the Victorian era. Along with studies of individuals are included more general essays surveying the reaction of the Established Church and on the nature of Catholicism.

The Underdraining of Farmland in England During the Nineteenth Century

A.D.M. Phillips

Over half of the agricultural area of England is subject to waterlogging and is in need of some form of underdraining, and yet, a wide-ranging debate has existed on the extent, effectiveness, and agricultural importance of underdraining in the nineteenth century. This study attempts to resolve the debate by examining the public and private draining loans and the accounts of estates in several counties.

British Policy and European Reconstruction After the First World War

Anne Orde

This book is a study in the political economy of post-First World War Europe, which examines in an international context the British role in postwar reconstruction. Britain, as a major trading nation and financial center, weakened by the War but less physically damaged than many belligerents, played an important role that hitherto has not received comprehensive treatment.

British Romantic Painting Raymond Lister

This is a lavishly illustrated survey of British painting of the period 1760-1860. The Introduction provides a brief account of the intellectual background that shaped the consciousness of artists and informed their work. Each area of painting is considered, from landscape to portraiture, from animal study to book illustration, from genre scenes to epic history, showing the rich variety of expression that artists brought to their subjects and the range of styles comprehended in the name "Romantic".

The Politics of India Since Independence

Paul Brass

The book argues that the Indian state, society and economy are in the midst of a systematic crisis produced by the excessive centralizing drives of a national leadership determined to transform the country into a modern, industrialized power. The emphasis is on the consequences of the distinctly different leadership, practices and policies of governments in the Nehru and post-Nehru periods.

The Commodity Culture of Victorian England

ADVERTISING AND SPECTACLE, 1851-1914

Thomas Richards. "A compelling story of how advertisers built a system of signs around the humble commodity, erased the line between the cultural and the economic, and laid the groundwork for our own spectacle of goods. Richards has made a subtle contribution to cultural studies."—Richard Ohmann, Wesleyan University. Illustrated. $29.50

The Criers and Hawkers of London

ENGRAVINGS AND DRAWINGS BY MARCELLUS LAROON

Edited and with Commentary by Sean Shesgreen. Published in 1687 and reprinted for the first time since 1821, Laroon's 74 engravings and the editor's commentary vividly call up the sights, sounds, tastes, and smells of daily life in a bygone London. Hawkers of strawberries, oysters, old clothes, combs, knives, and all manner of other things—legal and illegal—are depicted in the engravings, which are supplemented by 40 illustrations from early English and Continental prints and 19 Laroon drawings reproduced here for the first time. $45.00

MARX AND THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

FRANÇOIS FURET

Translated by Deborah Kan Furet

With Selections from Karl Marx

Edited and Introduced by Lucien Calvié

“Marx thought of writing a history of the French Revolution, but never actually did so. The idea of bringing together his fragmentary writings on the topic and subjecting them to a systematic analysis is an excellent one, and Furet carries it off brilliantly.”—Keith Baker, University of Chicago

The French Revolution and Its Legacy, 1789–1989

Edited by GEOFFREY BEST

This book is not about the French Revolution then, but about the French Revolution now. Eight world-renowned scholars—Conor Cruise O’Brien, Hew Strachan, Eugene Kamenka, Geoffrey Best, George Steiner, Eugen Weber, Norman Hampson, and Douglas Johnson—examine the Revolution’s continued reverberations throughout the world. Issues include the practice of nationalism, the pursuit of human rights, the conduct of war, and the way people practice revolution or criticize it.

VICTORIAN THINGS

Asa Briggs

Briggs presents an entertaining yet profound analysis of Victorian material culture and values, raising important theoretical issues concerning the meaning of objects, cultural anthropology, and the development of taste.

"Briggs whirls us on an exhilarating Cook's tour of the house the Victorians built: patent stoves disguised as suits of armour, Samain wear, Stephen's ink and Parker pens. . . . Private Theatricals

The Lives of the Victorians
Nina Auerbach

Charting the notable impact of the theater and theatricality on the Victorian imagination, Nina Auerbach provocatively reexamines the concept of sincerity and authenticity as literary ideal. In novels, popular fiction, and biographies, she unveils the theatrical element in lives imagined and represented. Focusing on three major points in the life cycle she demonstrates how the process of living was for the Victorians the acting of a role.

"Nina Auerbach's Private Theatricals is a remarkable work of synthesis.... This is a tightly packed and lucidly written study. Its ideas about role playing, the theater, and integral, double and multiple selves are constantly stimulating."

Fleeting Things

English Poets and Poems,
1616-1660

Gerald Hammond

Distinguished by its unconventional approach and extraordinary range, this beautifully written book offers new insights into the works and times of poets writing between the death of Shakespeare and the execution of Charles I. Well over a hundred readings provide illuminating discussions of the "canonical" poets such as Milton, Herbert, and Jonson, as well as enlightening reevaluations of many "minor" poets, including Herrick, Waller, and Lovelace.

"This is one of the best books on seventeenth-century poetry I have ever read. The style of Fleeting Things is personally distinctive yet elegant, lucid, engaging. This is also one of those rare and precious books that are held together by their own characteristic textures."

EUROPEAN HISTORY QUARTERLY

Edited by R M Blinkhorn, University of Lancaster

The areas of interest of European History Quarterly may be defined as European history since the later middle ages, and social and political thought placed squarely within a historical context. All historical approaches – social, political, cultural etc – are embraced, and contributions on British history which possess a broader European significance are welcome. The scope of the Quarterly's coverage ranges from fifteenth-century Prussia to post-1945 Anglo-French relations.

As well as original articles European History Quarterly also publishes lengthy historiographical essays, review articles and shorter reviews, laying some stress in doing so upon works published in European languages other than English.

JUNIUS AND HIS WORKS

A History of the Letters of Junius & The Authorship Controversy

by FRANCESCO CORDASCO & GUSTAVE SIMONSON

This lively, revealing book examines the history of the notorious writer who adopted the pseudonym "Junius" and contributed letters between 1769 and 1772 to the daily London Public Advertiser savagely attacking King George III and the policies of his ministers. Junius has never been identified. Some sixty claimants have been put forward, but for no one of them has the authorship of the Letters been proved. The pursuit of the historical Junius, for over two centuries, has continued to be an exciting game for first-rate minds, second-rate minds, and alas!, disordered minds. Junius And His Works is a masterfully prepared study, the first narrative history of Junius, comprehensive in its coverage, and engrossing in its fascinating exploration of the mystery of the historical Junius.

THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW

Edited by

P H Williams and R J W Evans

First published in January 1886, The English Historical Review is the oldest quarterly journal of historical scholarship in the English-speaking world. It deals with all aspects of European and world history, as well as the history of Britain itself, since the classical era.

The first section of each issue is devoted to major Articles, 'Notes and Documents', and Debates on medieval and modern themes. The second section is given over to an unusually extensive range of reviews and shorter notices of books published throughout the world.

A further important feature is the summary of international periodical literature published in the previous twelve months; this is compiled by historical period and by geographical area, and appears in the July issue each year.

London Charity in the Eighteenth Century

Donna T. Andrew

In this study of voluntary charities in eighteenth-century London, Donna Andrew reveals the interaction between charitable theorizing and practical efforts to improve the condition of the poor. The author argues that it is impossible to comprehend eighteenth-century charity without taking into account its perceived social utility.

"[This] bold and provocative sketch of changing patterns of social analysis provides not only an interesting descriptive survey in its own right, but also one rich with implications for our approach to and understanding of related topics."

Sex and Suffrage in Britain, 1860–1914

Susan Kingsley Kent

"In this intelligent and thoughtful work, Susan Kingsley Kent contends that the campaign for women's suffrage was not narrowly political but was, rather, the culmination of a unified feminist movement whose chief objective was the abolition of 'the double standard of morality, prostitution, and the sexual objectification and abuse of women.' . . . a lively, well-written and clearly argued book."
