The Royal Supremacy in the Elizabethan Church

CLAIRE CROSS

This book has a two-fold aim : to consider the theoretical extent of the royal supremacy in the Elizabethan Church and to see how far this supremacy was effective in practice. This discussion of religious and political issues will attract those interested in 16th Century history in general ; it is also intended for undergraduates studying Elizabethan history in depth and could well be used by those concentrating upon a special period within their 'A' level course.

History and Theory is the first international journal devoted to the philosophy of history. Monographs, essays, exchanges, reviews, and bibliographies are published in four areas: the theory of history; the method of history; historiography; and the relationship between problems in historical theory and method and those in economics, psychology, and other social sciences.

As one of the most important, vital, and comprehensive interdisciplinary journals of our time, it has elicited enthusiastic world-wide response.

Frequency: three numbers and a Beiheft per year.

Subscriptions: $6.00 per year. Subscriptions accepted in advance for as many years as desired.

Cambridge Studies in Medieval Life and Thought,
Second Series XIV

The School of Peter Abelard

*The Influence of Abelard's
Thought in the Early
Scholastic Period*

D. E. LUSCOMBE

Peter Abelard's public career was ended in 1140 by an ecclesiastical condemnation for heresy, but his thought touched upon central issues of the medieval scholastic movement and his teachings continued to be controversial.

Dr Luscombe discusses conflicting estimates of Abelard in the twelfth century and later and his influence on his contemporaries and successors.

This is the last book in the second series of Cambridge Studies in Medieval Life and Thought under the general editorship of Dom David Knowles.

Catholic Theories of Biblical Inspiration, 1810 to the Present

A Review and Critique

JAMES T. BURTCHAELL

Fr Burtchaell traces the background of the controversy and the contribution of the leading Catholic theologians in Europe from the foundation of the Tübingen school in 1810 until the papal condemnation of 'Modernism' in 1907. He goes on to assess the effect of this condemnation on the course of the debate during the first half of this century and suggests that much of the present theorizing by Catholics on inspiration is only a hesitant presentation of ideas that were more boldly advanced by progressive thinkers a century ago.

The Spirit of the Counter-Reformation

OUTRAM EVENNETT

Edited by JOHN BOSSY

Foreword by Dom DAVID KNOWLES

Isolates the special and positive characteristics of the Counter-Reformation, and accounts for them in relation to their environment. It is based on six lectures delivered by the late Outram Evennett as Birkbeck Lecturer in Cambridge in 1951. Dr Bossy has prepared them for publication and written a postscript analysing some of the problems raised since they were given.

'A brilliant and suggestive interpretation.' Church Times

Elizabeth and the English Reformation

The Struggle for a Stable Settlement of Religion

WILLIAM P. HAUGAARD

The early years of Elizabeth's reign set the direction of English religion after the Reformation. By centring his study on the Convocation of 1563, Professor Haugaard reassesses the roles of queen and cleric as they schemed and fought to make the national Church conform to their own particular vision of an ideal Christianity.

The Cambridge History of the Bible

Volume 2: The West, from the Fathers to the Reformation

Edited by
G. W. H. LAMPE

The Cambridge History of the Bible treats the Bible as the central document of Western civilization: a source of doctrine and of Church government, and an influence on education, on the growth of scholarship, and on art and literature, as well as on the liturgy and life of the Church. This volume covers the period from Jerome and the Fathers to the time of Erasmus. Each chapter is written by an expert on the subject, who summarizes existing knowledge and, in many cases, advances it by reporting his own research. 70s. net

Religion in the Middle East

Two Volumes

General Editor: A. J. ARBERRY

Subject Editors: DR E. I. J. ROSENTHAL (Judaism),
CANON M. A. C. WARREN (Christianity),
PROFESSOR C. F. BECKINGHAM (Islam)

'Among the factors dividing and, to a certain extent, uniting the peoples of the Middle East, not the least interesting and noteworthy are the religions they variously profess and the sects within each religion by which they are further fragmented.'

Volume I studies Judaism and Christianity; Volume II Islam, and their relationship with each other in concord and in conflict, during the last hundred years. The contributors also discuss the interaction of ethnic, economic, political, social and cultural factors to help a fuller understanding of the contemporary religious situation.
