The Embodied Mind

G. N. A. VESEY

For over three centuries thinking on the problem of mind's relation to the body has been dominated by the Cartesian notion that mind and matter are two distinct substances. The author investigates the possibility of accommodating within a framework derived from Kant the concept of mind as a subject related in experience to its objects. 20s.

Philosophy in America

The Beginnings of Indian Philosophy

FRANKLIN EDGERTON

This book sums up, in final form, Franklin Edgerton's views on early Indian philosophical speculation, arrived at only after a lifetime of philological study and reflection. The material is translated to show the beginning and early development of Hindu philosophy. 45s.

The Foundations of Metaphysics in Science

ERROL E. HARRIS

The reflection upon the world as revealed by the sciences is at least part of the scope of metaphysics. In this book the deliverances of the main sciences of nature, physics, biology, neurophysiology and psychology are reviewed and examined to elicit the general world-picture that they suggest.
