Cover Art: March, 2008: Visitors look at a re-created scene at the My Lai Massacre Museum at My Lai village in the central province of Quang Ngai, Vietnam. On March 16, 1968, hundreds (estimates range between 347 and 504) of civilians—mostly elderly people, women, and children—were murdered by US soldiers on what had been intended as a "search and destroy" mission to flush out Viet Cong fighters. Some of the women were raped and mutilated before being killed. The My Lai massacre was one of the most infamous atrocities of the Vietnam war. It is discussed, as an example of performative violence, in Lee Ann Fujii's article in this issue: "The Puzzle of Extra-Lethal Violence." (Photo by Hoang Dinh Nam/AFP/Getty Images)

Philosophy of Perspectives on Politics

Perspectives seeks to nurture a political science public sphere, publicizing important scholarly topics, ideas, and innovations, linking scholarly authors and readers, and promoting broad reflexive discussion among political scientists about the work that we do and why this work matters.

A full-length copy of the journal's editorial philosophy appears in Perspectives on Politics 8(1): 7–10 and also on the web at http://www.apsanet.org/content_44375.cfm.

Submission and Review

For submission guidelines, please see http://www.apsanet.org/content_44360.cfm.

Our editorial team discusses all submissions. Those that seem promising are evaluated by several external reviewers—with full confidentiality on both sides—and then accepted, returned for further revisions, or declined with suggestions of more appropriate venues for publication.

About APSA

Founded in 1903, the American Political Science Association is the leading professional organization for the study of political science and serves more than 15,000 members in over 80 countries. With a range of programs and services for individuals, departments, and institutions, APSA brings together political scientists from all fields of inquiry, regions, and occupational endeavors within and outside academe in order to expand awareness and understanding of politics.

The direct advancement of knowledge is at the core of APSA activities. We promote scholarly communication in political science through a variety of initiatives including publishing three distinguished journals: American Political Science Review, Perspectives on Politics, and PS: Political Science and Politics.
