

Income Distribution in Colombia

Albert Berry and Miguel Urrutia

This book describes the distribution of income in Colombia in the 1960's as well as trends during the previous three decades. The authors trace changes over time, present data on such factors as regional and sectoral disparities, sources of income, and the size of the industrial and agricultural establishment, and consider hypotheses that might explain the changes.

Industry and Economic Decline in Seventeenth-Century Venice

Richard Tilden Rapp

Mr. Rapp explains the paradox of seventeenth-century Venice—a republic that experienced a relative economic decline in commerce and industry with no absolute decline in overall income. The discussion focuses on common economic factors: labor supply and quality, technology and capital employment, foreign demand, and government policy. New analytical insights are offered on population, guilds, technology, and economic policy in early modern Europe.

Enterprise and Entrepreneurs in Nineteenth-and Twentieth-Century France

edited by Edward C. Carter II, Robert Forster, and Joseph N. Moody

The French entrepreneur has been much maligned for his concern with artistic quality at the expense of marketability. Four leading historians debate this issue. They determine the effects of the technical schools on business leadership, the importance of cultural factors and environmental conditions, and the relationship between the entrepreneur and the artist. $12.50

Rio Claro

A Brazilian Plantation System, 1820-1920

Warren Dean. This study of the county of Rio Claro, one of the main centers of Brazilian coffee production for over a century, focuses on the successive waves of people who made up the plantation's labor force, from African-born slaves to free laborers and immigrants. In the process, it illuminates the basic character of plantation systems—their profitability, efficiency, labor relations, and local and national influence. $11.50

THE ECONOMIC HISTORY ASSOCIATION

The Economic History Association was organized in 1940. Its purpose is to encourage research and teaching in the history of economic activity and of economic thought. It seeks to cooperate with societies devoted to the study of agricultural, business, industrial, and labor history. It aims to bring together economists, historians, statisticians, geographers, and others who find that the story of economic change throws light on their field of interest or is enriched by their contribution. Membership is open to all who are interested in the history of economic life in all its phases in the United States and other countries.

THE JOURNAL OF ECONOMIC HISTORY is published by The Economic History Association at The Johns Hopkins University. Books for review and correspondence concerning contributions to the JOURNAL should be addressed to the editorial office: The Editors, Journal of Economic History, Milton S. Eisenhower Library, The Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland 21218. Applications for membership should be addressed to: Richmond D. Williams, Treasurer, Eleutherian Mills Historical Library, Wilmington, Delaware 19807.
