A RACE FOR SURVIVAL

Developing Rural India

Plan and Practice

By JOHN W. MELLOR, THOMAS F. WEAVER, UMA J. LELE, and SHELDON R. SIMON. To discover how India's crucial food problem can best be solved, four agricultural economists review the successes and failures of agricultural planning in India for the past twenty years. Professor Mellor begins with an incisive review of the evolution of India's rural development policy which focuses on the effects of each of the five-year plans. His co-authors examine rural development in three different areas of central, western, and northern India. Finally, Professor Mellor turns to the future: the prospects for food self-sufficiency, the outlook for relieving rural unemployment, and the nature of the next round of problems to be faced. 416 pages, 19 figures, 57 tables. $10.00

SUCCESS OR FAILURE?

Korea

Democracy on Trial

By JOHN KIE-CHIANG OH. In this enlightening study of the politics and government of South Korea, the author evaluates how democracy has fared on that divided peninsula since 1945. He reviews South Korea's early experiments with Western democracy during the Syngman Rhee and Chang Myŏn administrations and examines the profound adjustments in the Korean polity following the coup d'état of 1961. Here Professor Oh analyzes in detail the developments under the military junta and in the Third Republic under President Chung Hee Park. The book concludes with an appraisal of the nature of Korean politics today and its possible course in the future. 264 pages. $7.95

INDIA AND WORLD POLITICS:

Krishna Menon's View of the World

Michael Brecher

"For 17 hours Mr. Brecher examined Mr. Menon over the rotating tapes. Perhaps nobody but Mr. Brecher could have pulled off this scoop. A professor of political science, he has studied Indian affairs for years. . . . He probably knows more about the first two decades of India's independence than anyone except Mr. Menon, with the result that this record of their exchanges is both revealing and dramatic."—The Observer (London). 402 pp., appendix, index. $10.00

VIETNAM: A POLITICAL HISTORY

Joseph Buttinger

This long-needed, inexpensive one-volume history of Vietnam from earliest times to the present is a brilliant condensation of Mr. Buttinger's highly acclaimed The Smaller Dragon and his definitive two-volume Vietnam: A Dragon Embattled. An incisive new chapter analyzes "The Americanization of the War" from the fall of Diem to the brink of the war's possible settlement in mid-1968. 576 pp., maps, notes, bibliog., index. Ancient China

From the Beginnings to the Empire

Jacques Gernet

Translated from the French by Raymond Dudoiff

Lean of form and Gallic in clarity, M. Gernet's account of Chinese history from its beginnings to the foundation of the Empire in 221 B.C. presents in outline present-day knowledge about the formative period of Chinese civilization. Particularly noteworthy is the author's insistence on the factors that determined the evolution of the Chinese world—the geographic configuration, ecology, technological innovations, and the sociological constituents in the emergence of China's great literary tradition—counterpointed by his judicious selection from significant archeological data accumulated through recent excavations.

Elite Conflict in a Plural Society

Twentieth-Century Bengal

J. H. Broomfield

For Bengal, which has had a stormy political history in this century, the long-standing antagonism among British, Hindus and Muslims culminated in the partition of the province upon the British withdrawal in 1947. This topic has received incidental attention in general accounts of Indian politics but no comprehensive treatment heretofore. Mr. Broomfield, a member of the Department of History at the University of Michigan, breaks new ground with this detailed study of the politics of a British Indian province. He reveals the social bases of political action in a linguistic region, examines the development of the parliamentary system and its effects on elite interaction, and establishes the crucial significance for Bengal of the decade following the outbreak of the First World War.

The Crisis of Indian Planning

ECONOMICS POLICY IN THE 1960s

Edited by PAUL STREETEN and MICHAEL LIPTON, both of the University of Sussex. This symposium provides analysis of the main aspects of Indian planning over recent years. The volume opens with an examination of the problems created by India's brand of federal democracy and then assesses industry and agriculture. The human factor is considered next with discussions of education, health, the family planning program, and the contribution of social anthropology to Indian planning. The book also analyzes defense and foreign aid and gives a statistical record of Indian planning and achievements. (Royal Institute of International Affairs).

Indonesia

By MALCOLM CALDWELL, University of London. Indonesia, the largest island complex in the world, is rapidly becoming a dominant power in Southeast Asia. Politically, the country is sophisticated, yet, according to the author, economic stagnation seems to be the stumbling block which is preventing Indonesia from becoming a greater power. In this wide-ranging study that traces Indonesia's present problems back to its colonial past, Mr. Caldwell includes an analysis of the economic potential of the country, as well as a detailed discussion of the rapidly changing milieu in the post-Sukarno era. George M. Beckmann and Okubo Genji

This is the first detailed account in any language of the founding and development of the Japanese Communist Party. Using Japanese materials that have only recently become accessible, the authors concentrate on the key period 1922-32, when the Party was at the peak of its influence. Its history vividly demonstrates the unusual difficulties that the left wing had in the face of strong Japanese nationalism and traditionalism, and casts new light on the nature of Japan's imperial system. As appendices, there are several key party documents, which appear in translation for the first time. There is also a section of biographical sketches, a chronology, and an extensive bibliography.

A Chinese Lineage Village: Sheung Shui

Hugh D. R. Baker

The lineage village, all of whose family heads bear the same surname and theoretically descend from the same ancestor, is a common type of community in South China. This detailed study focuses upon the effect of modern change, both internal and external, on the lineage village of Sheung Shui in the New Territories of Hong Kong. The village is viewed both as a self-contained community and as a part of a wider society, as a kinship-ritual group and as a community. A lengthy geographical and historical introduction relates Sheung Shui to its environment and to other similar and dissimilar villages. The external factors contributing to the accelerated pace of change in recent years are discussed in detail. $8.50

James Mill, Esq. History of British India

Introduction: John Kenneth Galbraith
In 4 Volumes

The History of British India, first published in 1817, made James Mill's reputation as a major philosophical historian. It also led to his profitable career with the East India Company and thus financed the education of his famous son. The work's dogmatic criticism of the Hindus inspired sharp controversy, but its imperial sweep of nearly two centuries of British rule, buttressed by its impressive command of revealing detail, earned it widespread acclaim as a landmark of the rationalist Enlightenment. For this first reissue in nearly 100 years, the publishers have chosen the 1858 edition, which incorporates the penetrating and often contentious footnotes of Oxford scholar H. H. Wilson. Professor Galbraith, in his 5,000-word introductory essay, describes the History as "a great piece of English prose. There are passages whose organ tones are worthy of Gibbon or Macaulay and which put Churchill to shame." Library edition, fine binding, $64.00.

China in Crisis

Volume I: China's Heritage and the Communist Political System
Edited by Ping-ti Ho and Tang Tsou

Perhaps more than any other modern country, China offers a unique opportunity to examine the relationship between tradition and modernity, between continuity and change in political and social institutions. This two-volume major work explains both traditional and contemporary China as well as her position in the current crisis in international affairs. The papers assembled here were presented at the inaugural conference (1966-67) of the Center for Policy Study at the University of Chicago. With a foreword by Charles U. Daly.

China in Crisis

Volume II: China's Policies in Asia and America's Alternatives
Edited by Tang Tsou

The continuing debate in the United States over policies toward China and Vietnam provides a compelling occasion for re-examining the objectives and capabilities of Communist China and her relations with major countries in Asia. This second volume of papers presented at the Center for Policy Study conference discusses China's military strength; her diplomatic opportunities, capacities, and constraints in Asia; her growing contacts with Japan; and three alternative American policies toward China.

Folktales of China

Edited and translated by Wolfram Eberhard

"... Professor Eberhard has made this book of interesting tales indispensable to the student of Chinese folklore literature."—Li Chi, Public Affairs. "The notes are extensive; the bibliography excellent. In addition to a general index there are two other indices: of motifs, and of tale types. The foreword... summarizes and explains the relation between the study of folklore and the rise of nationalism in China and assesses the unique value of the oral tale. Highly recommended."—Choice.

Peddlers and Princes

Social Development and Economic Change in Two Indonesian Towns
Clifford Geertz

An analysis of field materials on socioeconomic change gathered between 1952 and 1958 in the Javanese town of Modjokuto and the Balinese town of Tabanan. "... the analysis is incisive and insightful. It adds considerably to our understanding of contemporary Indonesia."—Edward M. Bruner, American Anthropologist. "Peddlers and Princes is... eminently rewarding... Case study and broader theory are brought together in an illuminating marriage."—Donald Hindley, The Annals. Comparative Studies of New Nations Series.

Rites of Modernization

Symbolic and Social Aspects of Indonesian Proletarian Drama
James L. Peacock

In this book, Peacock analyzes ludruk, the proletarian drama form in Surabaya, East Java, Indonesia. He contends that ludruk is aiding the modernization process in Surabaya by serving as an expression of the conflicts and doubts of the proletariat as they strive for new social positions. The genre of the plays, their stock characters and plot types are discussed in this intriguing approach to symbolic action in drama. First volume in the new series, Symbolic Anthropology, edited by David W. Crabb. Foreword by Dell Hymes.

The Archaeology of Ancient China

Revised and Enlarged Edition

by Kwang-chih Chang

In the first edition of this book, published in 1963, Mr. Chang presented a theory of the development of human culture in China during the late prehistoric and early historic periods. New archaeological data coming out of China between 1963 and 1966 have confirmed and strengthened Mr. Chang's theory at many points, and in this thoroughly revised and up-to-date edition the author presents his current thinking on ancient Chinese cultural development as well as a wealth of new material and additional illustrations.

Big Business in Japanese Politics

by Chitoshi Yanaga

In this first systematic effort to show how the power of organized big business operates directly and indirectly in Japan's political process, Mr. Yanaga provides the most penetrating analysis yet made of the nature, function, and role of the Japanese bureaucracy. He clearly shows that the Japanese governing process is a joint effort of big business, party government, and administrative bureaucracy.

Political Ideology in Malaysia

Reality and the Beliefs of an Elite

by James C. Scott

Adapting Robert E. Lane's well-known techniques of in-depth interviewing, Mr. Scott examines the ideological beliefs of seventeen randomly selected Malaysian civil servants representing the Westernized elites who have assumed positions of government leadership since independence. Exploring his subjects' basic value orientations toward human nature, nature itself, and time, the author analyzes the political implications of a social competition for resources that are conceived to be limited—a competition no longer restrained by traditional control.

Studies in the Chinese Humanities

Edited by Tse-tsung Chow

Chinese studies in the West have experienced a phenomenal escalation in recent years: over two hundred universities and colleges outside China now offer facilities for Chinese studies, and the number of students and specialists increases each year. There has resulted an urgent need for a forum dedicated specifically to critical scholarship in Chinese humanities—language, literature, philosophy, logic, historiography, and the arts. This volume, which offers twelve essays dealing primarily with poetry and poetics but embracing also fiction, philosophy, and linguistics, takes an important step toward meeting the need. Chinese characters are used generously and for most of the translated passages the Chinese text has also been supplied. $8.50
