World Order Award Changes

Officials at the University of Louisville have decided to change the Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order. Previously nominations were made by political scientists and book publishers. From among the nominees several committees winnowed candidates until a winner was selected.

Under the new plan, to begin in 1994, University of Louisville faculty will select themes or particularly compelling problems and invite an outstanding thinker to address them in a series of three lectures. Other scholars with differing perspectives will be invited to respond and dialogue, as will two major political figures.

The thinker chosen to address the issues will still be awarded the Grawemeyer Award at a black tie dinner, and will receive a substantial stipend for each lecture. "This will still be the largest award in the world for political science," says Weber, "but like everyone else, we need to do more with less. In addition to being more efficient, we want to be involved earlier in the process of generating ideas, and we want to bring intellectually challenging thinkers to wrestle with world problems on our campus. We hope to make a major contribution to the intellectual life at the university as well as help provide solutions to world problems."

The winner of the 1994 award will not be announced until plans for the lecture series have been finalized. Previous winners include Ernest May, Richard Neustadt, Robert Keohane, Robert Jervis, Prime Minister Gro Harland Brundtland, Sam Huntington, John Cobb, and Herman Daly.

Political scientists who wish to suggest ideas or persons for the award are still invited to do so, but there is no longer a formal nominating process.

Peace Science Society (International) Dissertation Award

The Peace Science Society (International) will bestow the Walter Isard Award upon the author of the best dissertation in peace science completed in the period 1992-94. The award is intended to honor outstanding contributions to the scientific knowledge of peace and conflict and carries a value of $1,000. Students of any nationality who have successfully defended a doctoral dissertation between July 1, 1992 and June 30, 1994 in any field on the subject of peace science, conflict behavior, international relations or a related topic are eligible. The winner will be selected on the basis of the importance and scientific significance of the dissertation with respect to the field of peace science and its contribution to the understanding of international behavior more generally. Interested persons should write to Professor Stuart A. Bremer, Peace Science Society, Department of Political Science, Binghamton University, Binghamton, NY 13902-6000 for more information.

Organization of American Historians Awards Program

The OAH is sponsoring a series of book awards to recognize works in various fields of history.

1995 Merle Curti Award in American Intellectual History

The Merle Curti Award in American Intellectual History is given by the Organization of American Historians in odd-numbered years to recognize books in the field of American intellectual history.

Publishers are urged to enter one or more books in the competition. Each entry must be published during the two-year period January 1, 1993, through December 31, 1994.

The schedule below should be followed in submitting books for the 1995 Merle Curti Award in American Intellectual History: Deadline for receipt by committee members of books published in 1993 has already passed. Deadline for receipt by committee members of books published in 1994 is October 1, 1994.

Final page proofs may be used for books to be published after October 1, 1994 and before January 1, 1995. If a final page proof is submitted, a bound copy of the entry must be submitted no later than January 7, 1995. No late submissions will be accepted.

The winner of the winning book will receive $1,000, a certificate and a medal. The publisher of the book will be honored with a certificate of merit. The award will be presented at the 1995 Annual Meeting of the OAH in Washington, DC, March 30-April 2, 1995.

One copy of each entry should be mailed directly to: Professor Drew R. McCoy, Committee Chair, Department of History, Clark University, 950 Main Street, Worcester, MA 01610; Professor Frederick Siegel (until January 1, 1994), 225 Argyle Road, Brooklyn, NY 11218; and Professor Dorothy Ross, 2914 33rd Place, NW, Washington, DC 20008.

All entries must be clearly labeled "1995 Merle Curti Award in American Intellectual History."

1995 Elliott Rudwick Prize

The Elliott Rudwick Prize was given for the first time in 1991 for a book on the experience of racial and ethnic minorities in the United States. Books on interactions between two or more minority groups, or comparing the experience of two or more minority groups, would be especially welcomed. The prize is given in memory of Elliott

Rudwick, professor of history and sociology at Kent State University, and is made possible through the generosity of August Meier, Professor Rudwick's longtime colleague and collaborator. A prize of $2,000 and a certificate is given biennially. The final prize will be given in 2001. No book that has won the organization's James A. Rawley Prize will be eligible for the Elliott Rudwick Prize.

Each entry must be published during the two-year period January 1, 1993 through December 31, 1994. One copy of each entry must be received by each member of the prize committee by September 1, 1994. Final page proofs may be used for books to be published after September 1, 1994 and before January 1, 1995. If a final page proof is submitted, a bound copy of the entry must be submitted no later than January 7, 1995. No late submissions will be accepted.

The author of the winning book will receive $2,000 and a certificate. The publisher of the book will be honored with a certificate of merit. The award will be presented at the 1995 Annual Meeting of the OAH in Washington, DC, March 30-April 2, 1995.

One copy of each entry should be mailed directly to: Professor Kerby A. Miller (Committee Chair), Department of History, University of Missouri-Columbia, 101 Read Hall, Columbia, MO 65211; Professor Cheryl Greenberg, Charles Warren Center, Harvard University, Robinson Hall, Cambridge, MA 02138; and Professor David A. Gerber, Department of History, State University of New York at Buffalo, Park Hall, Buffalo, NY 14260-4130.

All entries should be clearly labeled "1995 Elliott Rudwick Prize Entry."

1995 Ray Allen Billington Prize

The Ray Allen Billington Prize is given biennially by the Organization of American Historians for the best book in American frontier history, defined broadly so as to include the pioneer periods of all geographical areas and comparisons between American frontiers and others. First given in 1981, this prize honors Ray

Allen Billington, OAH president 1962-63.

Each entry must be published during the two-year period January 1, 1993 through December 31, 1994. One copy of each entry must be received by each member of the prize committee by October 1, 1994. Final page proofs may be used for books to be published after October 1, 1994 and before January 1, 1995. If a final page proof is submitted, a bound copy of the entry must be submitted no later than January 7, 1995. No late submissions will be accepted.

The author of the winning book will receive $1,000, a certificate and a medal. The publisher of the book will be honored with a certificate of merit. The prize will be presented at the 1995 Annual Meeting of the OAH in Washington, DC, March 30-April 2, 1995.

One copy of each entry should be mailed directly to: Professor Julie Roy Jeffrey (Committee Chair), (until May 31, 1994) Department of History, Goucher College, Baltimore, MD 21204; Professor David J. Weber, Department of History, Southern Methodist University, Dallas, TX 75275; and Professor William J. Cronon, (until December 31, 1993) 2027 Chadbourne Avenue, Madison, WI 53705, (January-June, 1994) Humanities Research Institute, University of California, Irvine, 307 Administration Building, Irvine, CA 92717-3350.

All entries should be clearly labeled "1995 Ray Allen Billington Prize Entry."

NEH Summer Seminar— Social Problems: The Constructionist Stance

Offered under the National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Seminars for College Teachers program, this seven-week seminar (June 13-July 29, 1994) will explore the construction of social problems, the processes by which public issues emerge and evolve. Topics for discussion will include current issues in social problems theory, the rhetoric of social problems claims, the medicalization of social problems, the roles played by social movements and the mass media, and the responses of policymakers and the public. The constructionist stance is comparative, suitable for analyzing a broad range of social problems across cultures and historical periods. This seminar may be of interest to scholars in several disciplines, including sociology, political science, anthropology, history, criminology, communications, journalism, and folklore.

NEH Summer Seminars are intended primarily for individuals teaching undergraduate courses at two- and five-year colleges and universities. Individuals who are not college teachers but who are qualified to carry out the work of the seminar are also eligible to apply. Individuals currently enrolled in graduate programs are not eligible. Participants will receive a stipend of $3,600.

Applications must be postmarked by March 1, 1994. For further information and application materials, contact: Joel Best, NEH Seminar Director, Department of Sociology, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, IL 62901-4524. Phone: (618) 453-7615.

Summer Faculty Institute Offered

The Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs (New York) and the University of Virginia announce a six-week summer faculty institute on "Teaching Ethics and International Affairs." The institute, supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, an independent agency, will be held on the campus of the University of Virginia (Charlottesville) from June 5 to July 15, 1994.

The institute will explore a range of ethical issues raised in international affairs from both historical and philosophical perspectives and will include presentations by distinguished scholars from across the nation and overseas. Twenty-five college and university faculty participants will be selected from a nationwide pool of applicants. Participants will have the opportunity to study classic texts from Thucydides to Weber, in addition to contemporary literature, and they will be encouraged to integrate ideas of ethical choice into their courses in history and international affairs.

For information and application materials, contact Matthew Mattern at the Carnegie Council, 170 East 64th Street, New York, NY 10021; phone: (212) 838-4120; fax: (212) 752-2432.

Editorial Office Changes

Editorial office of The Journal of Contemporary China (ISSN 1067-0564) will move from the Department of Political Science, University of California, San Diego, to the Department of Government, Colby College. After August 15, 1993, editorial correspondence should be addressed to: Suisheng Zhao, Editor, The Journal of Contemporary China, Department of Government, Colby College, Waterville, ME 04901; phone: (207) 872-3445; fax: (207) 872-3263.

The Journal of Contemporary China is the only English language journal in North America that provides exclusively information about contemporary Chinese affairs for scholars, businessmen and government policy-makers. Each issue of the journal contains theoretical and policy research articles, research notes and commentary on contemporary Chinese affairs, as well as book reviews of Chinese language works published in mainland China, Taiwan, Hong Kong, the United States, and other parts of the world.

Subscriptions (one year): Students, $21; individuals, $32; institutions, $50. For postage and handling in Canada and Mexico, please add $5 per year; outside of North America, $11. Please make your check or money order in U.S. dollars payable to Center for Modern China, P.O. Box AK, Princeton, NJ 08540; phone: (609) 497-1294; fax: (609) 497-1320.

New Journal Addresses Problems Faced by Oppressed Groups Worldwide

A quarterly journal dedicated to encouraging the peaceful resolution of group tensions through the world has begun publication with George Washington University terrorism expert Yonah Alexander as editor-in-chief. The International Journal of Group Rights focused on the plight of those who face persecution because of their ethnicity, religion, race, culture, language or other characteristics.

The journal's inaugural issue, published in July, contained articles by scholars and officials from the United States, Austria, Canada, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) and the United Nations.

The International Journal on Group Rights is published by Martinus Nijhoff Publishers in the Netherlands. Alexander may be contacted at the George Washington University, Gelman Library 622B, Washington, DC 20052; phone: (202) 994-5757; fax: (202) 994-5436.

Center for Critical Studies of Iran and the Middle East Established

In an effort to promote understanding of Iran and the Middle East through critical examination of its history, economic and cultural aspects the Center for Critical Studies of Iran and the Middle East has announced its establishment. The center is a non-profit, independent organization with academic affiliation hopes to encourage Middle Eastern studies by establishing a forum for critical thinking and free expression of ideas.

To forward these objectives, the center issues a biannual publication, Critique, and sponsors annual seminars and symposia dealing with current issues concerning Iran and the Middle East. It invites all interested in these goals to affiliate themselves with the center, either by participation in the seminars, or by contribution of articles or papers for publication in Critique.

Critique is a refereed journal which is published twice a year in the spring and fall. Annual subscription fee is $15 for individuals and $30 for institutions; for outside the U.S., there is an additional $5 postage fee.

Requests for subscriptions may be sent to: Center for Critical Studies of Iran and the Middle East, Hamline University, Box 19, 1536 Hewitt Avenue, St. Paul, MN 55104.

Institute of Research on Totalitarianism Opens in Germany

The Hannah Arendt Institute for Totalitarianism Research in Dresden, Germany, is now formally opened. The institute, which was founded in the fall of 1992, is the result of a Christian Democratic initiative in the Saxony state parliament; it is part of Dresden's Technical University. Research at the institute will encompass not only the history of the German Democratic Republic, but also the history of National Socialism in Germany. Named for the sociologist and political scientist Arendt (1905-1975), whose work centered on totalitarianism, the institute will examine the parallels and differences of the two systems.

Currently, the facility has four research positions, though plans call for ten researchers by the time it is fully operational at the end of 1994. The Arendt Institute intends to expand the interdisciplinary approach to include not only historical and political science researchers, but also those from the natural and social sciences, theology and psychology. For the moment, regional history will take precedence, in particular the operation of the Saxony state government between the years of 1945 and 1952. Further projects include the intimidation and indoctrination techniques of both systems, as well as the results of these techniques.

POLL Database Now Available on LEXIS/NEXIS

POLL, the world's largest database of polling data—nearly 200,000 survey questions and answers collected during the past 50 years—is now available for on-line computer access through LEXIS/NEXIS DIALOG and The Roper Center for Public Opinion Research.

POLL is produced by The Roper Center, a non-profit research center in the field of public opinion whose offices are located at the University of Connecticut. Its holdings go back to the first days of opinion research and it maintains surveys which examine thousands of topics.

The polling material filed in the database goes back five decades and includes nearly 200,000 items, with the most current material available being added every day.

POLL has been designed so that people using the system can locate, examine on their own screens and print all questions asked nationally on such issues as health care, consumer behavior, values, crime, education, race relations, politics or anything else researched by Gallup, Roper, Harris, ABC, CBS, NBC, CNN, the Wall Street Journal, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times, New York Times, or any of the other principal polling organizations who contribute their survey data to the center.

Information on POLL and other center services, including customized archive searches, can be obtained by contacting John M. Barry at The Roper Center for Public Opinion Research, University of Connecticut, P.O. Box 440, Storrs, CT 06268; phone: (203) 486-4440.

Early Agriculture Department Documents Now Accessible

A new index and microfiche collection that makes accessible tens of thousands of documents issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture before 1909 will be published in November 1993 by Congressional Information Service, Inc. (CIS). The index and microfiche collection make up Part 4 of CIS's U.S. Executive Branch Documents, 1789-1909.

The set provides access to records of agricultural advances in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. These records document the origins of many modern farming techniques, and show how Agriculture Department extension work educated farmers about these advances. In addition, there is material on the widening scope of the Agriculture Department's concerns during this period, including the expansion of foreign and domestic markets and the regulation of the food industry.

When completed in 1995, the sixpart project will provide access to millions of pages of information generated by virtually every executive agency in existence during the years from 1789 through 1909. Parts 1, 2, and 3 of the series are available now. For further information: Congressional Information Service, 4520 East-West Highway, Suite 800, Bethesda, MD 20814. Phone: (301) 654-1550 or (800) 638-8380.

NEH Now Accessible Via BITNET

The National Endowment for the Humanities is now on the BITNET electronic mail system. They will now be able to receive and process requests from individuals and institutions for publication and application information more efficiently. The main goal at NEH is to make grants to individuals and institutions for projects that will further the research, education, preservation, and public programs of the humanities. With the BITNET system, NEH can assist those individuals and institutions, by decreasing the turnaround time on their requests.

Studies of Legislatures and Democratization Published

The Research Committee of Legislative Specialists of the International Political Science Association has announced the publication of its first scholarly book: a 500-page collection of new international scholarship entitled Working Papers on Comparative Legislative Studies. Edited by research committee co-chair Lawrence D. Longley, this volume is the initial work in a projected series of publications making available the newest international scholarly thinking about the comparative forms and effects of legislative institutions, processes, and politics.

The book focuses on the role of legislatures and parliaments in democratizing and newly democratic regimes, and contains 35 professional papers by 45 leading international scholars from 16 different countries of the world. Among the topics addressed are members of parliaments and their leadership activities, parliaments and external forces, the relationship of parliaments and executives, single-country parliamentary studies, parliaments in long-time democratic regimes, and institution building in democratizing countries. This scholarly volume is the outgrowth of a major international conference on "The Role of Legislatures and Parliaments in Democratizing and Newly Democratic Regimes," jointly sponsored by the Research Committee of Legislative Specialists and by the Association Française de Science Politique, which was held in Paris, France in May 1993.

This 500-page book may be ordered now from the Research Committee Co-Chair, Professor Lawrence D. Longley, Department of Government, Lawrence University, Appleton, WI 54912; phone: (414) 832-6673; fax: (414) 832-6944, at a special RCLS member's price of $30 ($40 for non-members, institutions, and libraries) plus $5 postage (or $15 postage for world-wide air delivery). This RCLS book will be mailed immediately upon publication in October.

American Association for the Advancement of Science Offers Directory

The second edition of the 1993 AAAS Directory of Persecuted Scientists, Engineers, and Health Professionals catalogs the human rights violations of nearly 350 individuals throughout the world. This year's directory includes information on the release of 25 scientists, engineers, health professionals, and students in these fields who were listed in the 1992 directory.

The directory, compiled by the association's Science and Human Rights Program, calls on scientists to take action on behalf of their persecuted colleagues and encourages a letter writing campaign by providing the contact names and addresses of government officials in 23 countries. Later this year, a new dimension to the directory will be added. Information on new cases will be summarized and made available to subscribers of the AAAS Human Rights Action Network via electronic mail. The directory is available for $10 by calling the AAAS Science and Human Rights Program, (202) 326-6790. Reporters may obtain a review copy of the directory or further information by calling (202) 326-6718.

International listings are the newest feature of the AAAS "Green Book," Science Sources 1993. The directory, compiled by the AAAS Office of Communications, contains the names, addresses, and phone numbers of hundreds of scientific, medical, environmental, and engineering experts and their public information contacts. To order, call (301) 645-5643 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. (EST) and ask for AAAS, publication #93-20F. Cost to AAAS members is $12 each, $15 for non-members, plus $4 shipping and handling per order.

Manual for International Book and Journal Donations Now Available

This guide is designed to help U.S.-based donors place books and journals in appropriate libraries and institutions abroad. It focuses on placement of scholarly materials in the humanities and social sciences, but is applicable to other specialized and general fields.

It offers information for scholarly organizations on how to initiate effective programs to help colleagues in a certain region of the world, and for individuals on how to place a one-time donation, large or small. It also provides an overview of the context in which books are donated in the U.S. and placed in libraries in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and East/Central Europe. Profiles of ten independent non-profit intermediary organizations able to facilitate the placement of such particular and valuable donations, and fifteen donation programs organized by learned societies and federations of professional organizations, are included. A selective, annotated bibliography of resources lists directories of donation programs and useful tax benefit guides for individuals and organizations.

The full text of the 109-page Manual is available via anonymous FTP at BURGUNDY.OAH.-INDIANA.EDU [156.56.25.10] in the ACLS subdirectory.

For a printed copy, contact the office of Janet Greenberg at ACLS, 228 E. 45th Street, New York, NY 10017-3398. Please include a check made out to ACLS Manual for $10, to offset costs of production, shipping and handling. If payment is a hardship and requester has no access to the FTP site, fee will be waived.

The National Election Studies Recent Data Releases

During the spring of 1993, the National Election Studies turned over to the ICPSR two new data sets: the 1992 NES Pre-/Post-Election Study (ICPSR #6707) and the Pooled Senate Election Study 1988-90-92 (ICPSR #9580).

The 1992 NES Pre-/Post-Election Study (ICPSR #6707)

The 1992 NES entailed both a pre-election interview and a post-election re-interview. Approximately half of the cases are comprised of empaneled respondents first interviewed in the 1990 National Election Study and later in the 1991 Political Consequences of War Study. Altogether, 2,487 citizens were interviewed in the weeks prior to the November 3, 1992 election. In the weeks following the election, 2,255 pre-election respondents were re-interviewed.

The content of the 1992 Election Study reflects its double duty, both as the traditional presidential election year time-series data collection and as a panel study.

As of August 1993, only the NES Study Staff release of the 1992 NES Pre-/Post-Election Study data set was available. The Study Staff release contains data only for those questions asked in the 1992 Pre-/Post-Election Studies, and not any lagged variables for questions asked of panel respondents in 1990 or 1992. This release contains all field and sampling variables, and summary (i.e., recoded) measures of occupation.

The Pooled Senate Election Study, 1988-90-92 (ICPSR #9580)

In 1988, 1990 and 1992, the National Science Foundation funded NES to carry out a study of Senate elections. In the weeks immediately following the November general elections in those years, NES interviewed by telephone small samples of respondents from each of the 50 states. There are four central design features here: interviewing over three elections; interviewing in states with and without Senate elections; asking questions about both the Senator up for election and the one who is not; merging the survey data with contextual data describing the setting of each election. These features permit the over-time mapping of how the same constituents' relationships with their Senator changes two, four and six years into the term.

Data from the 1992 installment of the Senate Election Study have been pooled with the 1988 and 1990 data into a single file. There are 9,253 respondents and 1,899 variables, counting both survey and contextual data variables.

On the Horizon—Upcoming Data Releases

During the fall of 1993 and the early winter of 1994, the National Election Studies will be working on a number of new data sets, as well as conducting the 1993 Pilot Study. Schedules are not yet firm, but the following information can be offered now.

The 1993 Pilot Study

Pilot Study Background. With the exception of 1983, NES has conducted pilot studies in the odd-numbered years from 1979 through 1991 for the upcoming wave of the traditional time-series election study. The usual focus of these pilot studies is on content which is proposed to be carried in the upcoming time-series election study, but which is thought to need extensive testing first. The usual sample size for these studies has been 300-500. Typically, there are two waves to a pilot study.

1993 Specifics. The 1993 Pilot Study, like the 1991 Pilot Study (which focused on the political consequences of the Persian Gulf War), combines instrumentation-testing with substantive goals. In the 1993 study, which goes into the field September 15 (10 months after the 1992 election), the major substantive focus is on the process by which new House members secure their districts and on how the Clinton coalition is faring with the electorate. There are also a number of questions about the sources of support for Perot.

New instrumentation being tested include questions regarding attitudes about homosexuality; about the interest-group basis of political attitudes; about the proposed changes in health care policy; and about sources of Perot's support.

The sample for the 1993 Pilot Study will be the cross-section respondents to the 1992 election study. The study will be in the field from September 15 through December 1, with data release expected in mid- to late-January.
