OTHER ACTIVITIES

The Moses Coit Tyler Prize in American Intellectual History, made possible by the generosity of the Cornell University Press and by action of the Council of the American Historical Association, will be offered in 1959 for the best complete original manuscript submitted in English on American intellectual history.

"American intellectual history" is to be understood broadly to include histories of movements of thought, and of the recognized institutions or agencies of intellectual life, and biographies or studies of intellectual leaders in America. They must concern the area of the present United States during the years since 1607. Studies in the history of the arts and sciences, and in religious, economic, political, educational, or other topical ideas, are all sought, if they relate to the general history of American culture or events and are not confined to technical or specialized topics. Manuscripts must be scholarly and must be the author's first or second book. A doctoral dissertation to be eligible, even though it be revised from its original form, must be accompanied by a statement from the professorial adviser (or, in special cases, from another senior expert in the field) which certifies that in his judgment it is now ready for publication. Two copies of the manuscript must be submitted, one of them the ribbon copy, no later than June 1, 1959. The prize consists of $1500 in cash and publication by the Cornell University Press. Royalties accruing to the published work will be assigned to the American Historical Association.

The members for 1959 of the Committee on the Moses Coit Tyler Prize in American intellectual history are: Charles A. Barker, The Johns Hopkins University, Chairman;

Ralph H. Gabriel, Yale University; John Higham, Rutgers University; Stow Persons, State University of Iowa; and Frederick Rudolph, Williams College. Inquiries and manuscripts should be addressed to the Chairman, from whom application forms and further details can be secured.

During the academic year 1958-59 the Social Science Research Council will accept applications from permanent residents of the United States and Canada for the following types of fellowships and grants for training or research in social science:

Predoctoral and Postdoctoral Research Training Fellowships, to provide more advanced research training than that afforded by the usual Ph.D. program. Predoctoral fellowships are available only after fulfilment of all requirements for the doctoral degree with the exception of the dissertation, but applications may be submitted in anticipation of fulfilling these requirements within the ensuing year.

Fellowships for Dissertation Completion, open to Ph.D. candidates who can complete the writing of their dissertations if freed from other occupation for terms ranging from a few months to a maximum of one year.

Fellowships in Political Theory and Legal Philosophy, open to Ph.D. candidates who have completed all requirements except the dissertation and to persons who have received the Ph.D. or a law degree within the past three years.

Grants-in-Aid of Research and Faculty Research Grants, in amounts up to $6000 to defray direct costs or to provide free time for individual research, or both; available only to scholars who are no longer candidates for degrees and whose capacity for effective research has been demonstrated by previous work. In 1958-59, for the first time, these grants will be awarded both in January and in April, with closing dates for applications November 1 and February 1.

Special grants for social science research in the following fields: American Governmental Processes; The Near and Middle East; Slavic and East European Studies.

International Conference Travel Grants equivalent to tourist-class fare for social scientists attending certain international meetings to be designated by the Council.

In addition to the foregoing appointments for which individuals may apply directly, nominations are invited for the following:

Faculty Research Fellowships, providing part-time release from other duties for independent research for a term of three years, for a few social science teachers, normally not over 35 years of age; available to college and university faculty members in the United States only.

Senior Research Awards in American Governmental Affairs, to provide maintenance and research expenses for one year for about five distinguished scholars.

Auxiliary Research Awards of $4000 to be awarded without reference to specific research projects to about 25 younger social scientists selected on the basis of past achievement and future promise of significant research.

Certain other specialized grant programs terminated with the awards made last spring: State Politics; National Defense Problems; Field Studies of Political Groups in Foreign Areas.

Closing dates for applications or nominations will differ for the several programs, the earliest being October 15. Prospective candidates are urged to write to the Social Science Research Council, 230 Park Avenue, New York 17, New York, as early as possible to be assured of receiving the detailed announcement which will be issued toward the end of summer. Requests for application forms should indicate age, highest academic degree held, present position or activity, and the purpose for which a fellowship or grant is desired.
