INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL SCIENCE REVIEW

Published by Butterworths for the International Political Science Association

General Editors: Professor John Meisel, Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, Canada and Professor Jean Laponce, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, BC, Canada

The International Political Science Review is the quarterly journal of the International Political Science Association. It was created to meet the needs of political scientists throughout the world interested in the advancement of their discipline and in escaping the parochialism threatening the pursuit of knowledge within the confines of a single culture. The contents of the journal reflect the aims and intellectual tradition of the parent body: the creation and dissemination of rigorous political inquiry free of any subdisciplinary or other orthodoxy.

Two principal aims animate the Review: to provide its readers promptly with the best work being undertaken in political science (1) on the central and currently controversial themes of the discipline, and (2) in new areas of inquiry where political scientists – alone or in conjunction with other scholars – are shaping innovative concepts and methodologies of political analysis.

The journal has been particularly successful in bringing together, within each of its volumes, the work of experts from all corners of the globe, exploring themes from a variety of perspectives. Recent thematic issues have covered:

- * Case Studies in Psychopolitics (issue editor Elizabeth W. Marvik)
- * Bureaucratic Morality (issue editors O.P. Dwivedi and Dele Olowu)
- * Political Leadership (issue editor Jerzy J. Wiatr)
- * Visionary Realism and Political Leadership (issue editor Michael Keren)
