The New World Figurine Project

From its inception in 1987, the New World Figurine Project has been designed to compile and publish comprehensive illustrated data on New World figurines.

Terry Prewitt, professor of Anthropology at the University of West Florida, believes that "the New World Figurine Project ushers in a new era of archaeology. A central source of data is long overdue."

Robert L. Carneiro, Curator of the American Museum of Natural History, has also praised this work. "This volume demonstrates very nicely how from one small segment of a culture—figurines—it is possible, with painstaking work, sympathetic insight, and a little daring, to project a much larger picture of the culture and its associations."
