NEW 'BATSFORD' BOOKS

The Old Churches of London

Gerald Cobb & Geoffrey Webb

The destruction of so many fine buildings through indiscriminate bombing has awakened as much interest as it has excited grief about the splendid but little realized inheritance of London Churches, which can now be visualized as a whole in this remarkable book. The illustrations include six colour plates, and over 120 photographs, many hitherto unpublished, of churches which have survived or been destroyed.

With its beautiful coloured jacket by Randolph Schwabe, this is a book that should immediately establish itself as the standard work on its subject. 15s. net

Shakespeare's Country

John Russell

This attractive volume includes that gracious and intensely English tract, the Western Midlands, of which the centre will always be associated with the life and writings of Shakespeare. From the results of personal visits and observation, coupled with wide study, the author has produced a brilliant and informed survey which embraces Shakespeare and Stratford; Social and Economic History; Houses and Some People; Churches and their Craftsmanship; Town and Country, &c. There are 120 illustrations from photographs, drawings and prints and 4 plates in colour. 10s. 6d. net

The Battle for Freedom

Thérèse Bonney

With an Introduction by Michael Foot

A photographic record of what the war has done, and is doing, to the small people. The author was commissioned to take these pictures by the Carnegie Corporation, and they will ultimately be deposited in the Library of Congress at Washington. She was in Belgium when the Germans invaded it in May, 1940, accompanied the vast army of refugees that streamed along the roads of Belgium and Northern France as the Allies were pressed back, visited England in time to record the Blitz, and then returned once more to Unoccupied France and Spain. Everywhere she went she took photographs, and the hundred or so included in this book are chosen to speak of the misery and grim betrayal that has befallen the defeated peoples. 7s. 6d. net

Remembrance: An Autobiography

H. J. Massingham

An account of the author's pilgrimage from a metropolitan upbringing and early journalistic career in the traditions of the last great days of Victorian radicalism, to a village life devoted to the study and recording of English country life. There are about 50 illustrations. 10s. 6d. net
