PUBLICATIONS

The Journal of Law, Medicine & Ethics is a peer reviewed quarterly read by more than 5,000 health care professionals. It provides articles on such timely topics as health care quality and access, managed care, pain relief, genetics, child/maternal health, reproductive health, informed consent, assisted dying, ethics committees, HIV/AIDS, and public health. Issues review significant policy developments, health law court decisions, and books.

The Winter 1997 issue contains papers on cancer genetic susceptibility testing and on anticipatory guidelines for cloning. The Spring 1998 issue contains papers on reproductive health (PGD and ICSI) and the relationship between hospital tax-exempt status and community benefit.

The American Journal of Law & Medicine is a law review fulfilling the need to improve communication between legal and medical professionals. Issues contain articles and case notes—on themes in health law and policy, and on the legal, ethical, and economic aspects of medical practice, research, and education—and health law court decisions and book reviews.

The Winter 1997 issue contains papers on direct risk contacting for providers and on physician deselection. The Spring 1998 issue contains papers on the class action as a means to empower patients and on antitrust laws and provider networks.
