METAPHYSICS OF NATURAL COMPLEXES

Justus Buchler

In this new theoretical work, the concept of natural complex opens the way to systematic integration of six categories: prevalence, alescence, ordinality, relation, possibility, and actuality. The author considers the notions of trait, order, and determinateness, and also the doctrine of ontological priority which he refutes in formulating a principle of ontological parity.

KANT'S SOLUTION FOR VERIFICATION IN METAPHYSICS

D. P. DRYER

This fresh and illuminating account of Kant's Critique of Pure Reason unfolds its central argument, removes obscurities which have surrounded Kant's analysis of knowledge, the manner in which he distinguishes metaphysics on the one hand from mathematics on the other hand, the argument of the transcendental deduction, and the schemata of the categories.

LOGIC: A MODERN INTRODUCTION TO DEDUCTIVE REASONING

by
D. Burnham
Terrell, Department of Philosophy, University
of Minnesota

This volume acquaints the student with the elements of formal logic and shows how the principles of systematic logic relate to ordinary reasoning and problem-solving. Applications to computer programming are used to illustrate some of the practical and technical uses of logic. Similarities between traditional and modern logic are more clearly brought out than ever before. Professor Terrell's treatment throughout combines the familiarity and common sense of classical logic with the rigour and self-consciousness of modern logic. He introduces evaluation charts, in addition to Venn diagrams, to aid the student in determining truth values of compound statements and the validity of arguments. This modern presentation of classical logic reveals the latter as pertinent and essential to present day study.

PERSPECTIVES IN SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY

Fundamental issues inherent in the relation of man and society, in mores and values, state and authority, law and rights, political obligation and justice are discussed in full in this anthology. Nine major viewpoints are developed by the chief exponent of each theory: Classical realism, positivism, liberalism, utilitarianism, idealism, communism, pragmatism, existentialism, and analytic philosophy. Students of philosophy, political science and sociology will find these studies valuable.
